Dewey Opens Formal Drive For G. O. P. Nomination

'Glad' to Run, He Tells N. Y. Party Chiefs as They Set Up Headquarters

(Picture on Page 2.)
By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 1.—A Presidential boom for Thomas E. Dewey was set off today at a ceremony in which the New York district attorney formally entered the lists for the Republican nomination.

Replying to a declaration by a group of State party leaders that they were convinced Dewey could carry not only the "pivotal" State of New York, "but also the country at large next year against any opponent," Dewey declared:

"I will be glad to make the fight.

"I have confidence in the Republican Party, which has always stood for good government and stable business," he said. "Today its responsibility is to reawaken hope and courage in a nation which is driven almost to despair by incompetent government and unstable business."

Headquarters Opened

Dewey added he had "faith in the Nation and in its future and in every element of its people.

"Relieved of a hostile and sniping government," Dewey said, "I am convinced that they can again learn to pull together for a happy and united Nation."

Dewey was interviewed at opening of "Dewey for President" headquarters, in which were gathered Republican leaders from throughout the State.

The manifesto was read to Dewey by J. Russel Sprague, Republican chairman of Nassau County, who will direct the pre-convention campaign. It extended "to all citizens a cordial invitation to join with us" to bring about Dewey's nomination.

"Convinced that he possesses above all other leaders in the country today the ability, temperament, training and ideals which the next President of the United States must have," the statement recited, "we have determined to cooperate in the movement to elect Thomas E. Dewey President in 1940."

Defers to Vandenberg

Dewey disclosed he would enter Presidential primary elections in some States, which he did not name, but emphasized he would not seek delegations in States where there are other "active and genuine" candidates, including his native State of Michigan.

"For example," he said, "I certainly will not go into Michigan, for I believe that Senator Vandenberg is entitled to the delegates from his State."

Dewey's first public appearance as a candidate will be before the Minnesota Central Republican committee in Minneapolis, December 6. Returning from Minneapolis, Dewey will arrive in Washington December 9 for conferences with some Republican Senators and Representatives before attending the newspapermen's Gridiron dinner that night.

Downtown Shooting Gallery Held Up With Its Own Gun

'Little Short Fellow' With Sure Aim Scores Prize Bullseye, Takes Receipts, Then Sends Volley Past Clerk's Ears

A "little short fellow" with sure aim late yesterday impressed the management of an E street shooting gallery with one quick bullseye and two near bullseyes, for a 25-cent prize, then threw three gratuitous shots from the management's pistol past the management's ear and paid himself off by taking the whole day's receipts in a holdup.

Such irregular shooting in a regular holdup, not 20 feet from one of Washington's busiest intersections, was successfully arranged so the robbery equipment along with the approximately $15 loss would be on the house.

No other person was in the gallery at 1305 E street northwest but Charles Carben, an attendant. He was polishing and loading guns and adjusting targets.

A "little short fellow, about 22, wearing a blue striped suit and hatless," came in. He wanted to take six shots with a pistol, he said. Carben liked the way he shot. He had a way with revolvers.

Out went a bullseye; bullets grazed two others. Then he flipped a paper bag on the counter. Carben read an attached note: "Keep your mouth shut. Put the money in."

"Get back there," the short fellow said. Carben backed down the gallery. Three bullets sang by his right ear.

"Certainly, I heard them sing," said Carben later. "You know, they make a little sound." But before this outburst, Carben had emptied the cash drawer of all but a quarter into the bag.

The little short fellow left the smoking six-shooting .22-caliber revolver on the counter. The police have it now, looking for fingerprints. Carben, 30, who lives at 1237 N street northwest, regarded the pistol while bystanders commented that a .22-caliber bullet isn't big, but will kill.

The robber, a bystander told police, disappeared in heavy crowds at Fourteenth street.

Police Seize 35 Men in 5 Bookie Raids

Nine Are Charged With Violating Gambling Laws

In simultaneous raids on five suspected race bet headquarters, Washington's undercover police last night arrested 35 men and seized hundreds of dollars in wagers.

Nine men were charged with various gaming violations, while police held others for investigation. Among those held were a Department of Justice attorney and an Internal Revenue Bureau accountant, both suspected of participating in the operation of the betting setup.

The detectives estimated that at least 100 players and hangers-on were released at the scene of the raids. The drive, carried out by 20 police in squads of four, was supervised by Lieut. Earl P. Hartman, chief of the department's new special investigation unit.

The places raided included a newsstand in the 500 block of Twelfth street northwest, which used to serve as headquarters for Sam Beard, who dominated the District's race-bet racket until sentenced to Atlanta several years ago; another newsstand in the 400 block of Tenth street, at which the raiders had to smash a door to gain entrance to the rear; a restaurant in the 1200 block I street; a pool room in the 400 block of Eleventh street northwest, and an orange juice parlor in the 1100 block of Fourteenth street northwest.

Finns Defend Civilization, Says Premier

'Never Will Yield Right to Decide Our Own Affairs,' Ryti Tells U. S. on Radio

By the Associated Press

Helsinki (Saturday), Dec. 2 (Via Radio).—Premier Ryti declared today in a special message to the United States that Finland would never "barter away the right to decide our own affairs."

The premier's speech was read for him by an assistant.

The Finns, Ryti declared, were "defending all the civilized peoples of the world in their great historic mission."

His address was the first of its kind to go out from this tottering capital since the Red army marched into the Republic Thursday morning.

"You in America," Ryti said in the beginning, "have never lived under this distress, for which God be thanked.

"The experiences we are undergoing now are such that they make me hope you will never undergo them . . . our people recoil in horror from the scenes . . . but are not afraid."

Appeal to Humanity

"We, as you know, belong to the nations which most value peace. . . . We are not complaining; from one standpoint, we are proud of our position. The Finnish people have dwelt for 15 centuries in their beautiful country, cleared its soil for cultivation and created in close cooperation with all other civilized nations of the world a culture that is only now . . . giving Finland her place among the company of nations."

The Finnish people, he declared, were "appealing to justice and humanity" to "demand for themselves the right to continue in peace and complete political independence . . . to labor for the welfare of their country."

"They are aware," he continued, "that they are defending the same values which inspire all the civilized nations of the world."

Willing to Negotiate

"The Finnish people are bound by unbreakable ties to the nations which have made up what we know as Western culture," he said.

He added then that Finland wanted "no more than friendly cooperation," and that even though "all the values on which our lives are based are imperilled" the people considered the maintenance of their independence a "duty toward the whole of mankind."

"We are willing to negotiate regarding every dispute that may arise between two neighboring nations. But we will not consent to barter away our independence nor our right to decide our own affairs."

2 Extra Days Off Presidents Gift To U. S. Workers

A Christmas present from the White House came to all Government and District employes yesterday in the form of an executive order giving them two extra days off at Christmas and New Year's.

President Roosevelt granted the Government employes a full holiday for the Saturdays before both Christmas and New Year's Day. His order, through the usual practice of the District Commissioners, will extend also to the District employes.

The President's action gives Government and District workers two three-day vacations, since Christmas and New Year's Day this year fall on Monday.

His order said the Federal offices in the District, including the Government Printing Office, the Navy Yard, and naval stations, will be closed December 23 and 30.

All Federal employes in Washington and in the field are to be excused from duty on those days, except "those who may for special public reasons be excluded from the provisions of this order by the heads of their respective departments, establishments, or agencies, or those whose absence from duty would be inconsistent with the provisions of the existing law."

Roosevelt Calls Invasion 'Wanton'

'Moral Embargo' Set Up to Halt Aircraft Deals; Commission Here With Cash

By William V. Nessly
Post Staff Writer

A "moral embargo" on sale of American war planes to Russia was put into effect last night a few hours after President Roosevelt had condemned the Soviets' "wanton disregard for law" in invading Finland.

The embargo, unofficial but Nation-wide in extent, was clamped down while a Russian buying mission was disclosed to be going from one plane factory to another in this country offering large amounts of cash for various types of American fighting aircraft.

Despite the unofficial nature of the ban it was considered so tight that an authoritative source here emphatically predicted the Russians would be unable to buy a single American plane with which to strengthen their war machine.

Resentment Grows

The embargo was one result of mounting American anger at the Red army's violation of Finland's territory and the slaying of noncombatants with air bombs.

It became known also that throughout Thursday and yesterday the President was under steadily increasing pressure to break off relations with the Moscow government as an expression of American revulsion for the Reds' attack on their small neighbor. It was understood, however, that the President and Secretary Hull were determined not to act precipitately, but to await further developments and a more definite knowledge of Russia's intentions before reaching any decision.

"A Profound Shock"

The day of tension was touched off by Mr. Roosevelt's statement, given to correspondents at his press conference yesterday morning. The President read in grave tones:

"The news of the Soviet naval and military bombings within Finnish territory has come as a profound shock to the Government and people of the United States.

"Despite efforts made to solve the dispute by peaceful methods to which no reasonable objection could be offered, one power has chosen to resort to force of arms. It is tragic to see the policy of force spreading, and to realize that wanton disregard for law is still on the march.

"All peace-loving people in those nations that are still hoping for the continuance of relations throughout the world on the basis of law and order will unanimously

Money For Finn Debt In N. Y. Bank

Finnish Minister Hjalmar Procope last night revealed his nation would not default on its next debt instalment to this Government, totaling $234,600 and due December 15.

"That money has for one week been on deposit in the National City Bank of New York," he said. "On the designated date, it will be paid to Secretary Morgenthau. Neither will the invasion cause us to cancel our order for ten American airplanes. The funds to pay for these are also already in this country."

Soviets Deny Bombing Civilians, Call President's Plea 'Pointless'

Molotoff's Reply Says Only Military Objectives Have Been Raided, Speaks Of Concern for Finnish Population

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Dec. 1 (AP).—President Roosevelt's appeal against air bombardment of civilians in Finland was described tonight by Premier-Foreign Commissar Molotoff as "pointless" because he said Soviet planes had not done so and did not intend to.

A communique distributed by Tass, official news agency, said Molotoff delivered the Soviet reply to the President's appeal in a conference with United States Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt.

"Roosevelt's suggestion that air bombardment of the population of Finland's towns should not be permitted, insofar as it is addressed to the Soviet government, is caused by misunderstanding," the news agency said Molotoff told Steinhardt.

"Soviet airplanes have not bombed towns and are not going to do so, but they bombed airdromes, because our government values the interests of the Finnish population no less than any other government does.

"Certainly, one may fail to see this from America over eight thousand kilometers (5,000 miles) away from Finland. Nevertheless, facts are facts.

"In view of this Roosevelt's above statement is, as can be seen, pointless."

Mr. Roosevelt addressed his appeal jointly to Russia and Finland. It was similar to others addressed to belligerents in recent conflicts.

Helsinki Evacuates All It Can Spare; Four Raids in Day

By Raymond Daniell
Copyright by New York Times

London, Dec. 1.—Telephone calls to Helsinki tonight disclosed that half of the Finnish capital's population of 300,000 is in flight, and that nearly all of those who remain are engaged in fire-fighting, first aid or other government service.

There were four Russian air raids on the city during the day. The distraught tone of Marcus Tollet, Times correspondent in Helsinki, over the telephone, probably gave a more accurate version of what is happening there, than anything he could have written.

It was a bad connection and Tollet's English is falteringly slow. His wife had collapsed and his daughter had been called up for broadcasting in English on the government radio, and he had been without sleep for 48 hours.

Many Homes Blasted

Russian bombs had set fire to oil and naval docks. A few had hit military objectives. Many had torn through the roofs of humble dwellings, killing scores, and injuring many more.

It was misty, rainy, dark and "unpleasant," Tollet said, in Helsinki with its thousands rushing away. These facts, together with what had happened to his wife and family were important to Marcus Tollet.

Four Soviet planes had been brought down by Finnish defense forces. The water supply system had escaped damage. Railroads were still operating, and the light-power system was intact, Tollet said.

Every private automobile in Finland has been called into service for hauling ammunition and men. Taxicabs, Tollet said, were being used to take fleeing citizens from the capital.

Little preparation had been made for evacuation because of the government's confidence that the dispute with Russia could be settled by negotiation.

Bombs, which rained over Helsinki, did great damage in the western part of the city, where one hit a large apartment house and damaged scores of workmen's homes. Former Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko's home was wrecked and his daughter injured, according to a report, Tollet said.

Britain Calls 300,000 More Men to Colors

Mines Sink Two Steamers; 3d Missing; Danish Ship Wrecked

Copyright by New York Times

London, Dec. 1.—A quarter of a million men, from 22 to 23 years, and an estimated 50,000 more who have reached the age of 20 since compulsory military service was established, were called to the colors today.

This is the third such call, and when the young men affected report December 9 they will make a total of more than 750,000 who will have registered as available for duty with Great Britain's land and air forces.

It was expected that the new call would add at least another 250,000 to the fighting forces. About 50,000, it is believed, will be exempted because of occupational and medical reasons, and for conscientious objections. Leslie Hore-Belisha, minister of war, announced on November 22 that there were then nearly 1,000,000 men under training in Great Britain and more than 158,000 were in France.

The 4,558-ton New Castle steamer Dalryan struck a mine off the southeast coast of England today and went down in full view of the thousands of people on shore. All 38 of the crew aboard were saved and only 1 was hurt.

Schooner Goes Down

The London steamer Stanbrook, of 1,383 tons, which left Antwerp two weeks ago for England, was reported missing today.

Last night the Danish three-masted schooner Grethe, of 264 tons, sank off the Goodwin Sands after, it is believed, it hit a submerged wreck. Its captain and crew of six were saved.

The Finnish steamer Mercator, of 4,260 tons, outward bound for Norway, struck a mine off the Scottish coast today and sank within six minutes. Only one member of the crew was missing. The other 35 were landed at a Scottish port.

[It was announced in Berlin today that since the outbreak of war 194 Allied and neutral merchant ships, totaling 735,768 tons, en route to Britain had been sunk by German submarines or mines.—Editor's note.]

Navy Rejects Pocket Battleship Design for Two New Cruisers

By John G. Norris.

The Navy announced yesterday that two cruisers which it has delayed laying down to study lessons of the European war will be of 10,000 tons each, 25 per cent larger than originally planned.

In calling for bids on the two vessels—already named the Columbia and Cleveland—the Navy Department specified that they be light cruisers carrying 6-inch guns. Indications were that they will be generally similar to the Brooklyn class now with the fleet.

The decision was tantamount to a rejection of the German "pocket" battleship type of vessel and a reaffirmation of the latest type cruisers built by this country. Reports indicate that our naval experts had the Deutschland type—a 10,000-ton vessel mounting both 11 and 6 inch guns—under consideration.

Treaty limitations in existence prior to the war, had limited the two cruisers to 8,000, but with all limits now [illegible] the Navy was able to build larger ships. Built or building, the United States now has 41 cruisers; 18 heavy cruisers of 10,000 tons, carrying 8-inch guns; 9 light cruisers of similar size; 10 light cruisers of 7,500 tons, and 4 of 6,000 tons. All light cruisers carry 6-inch guns.

Bids for the Columbia and Cleveland will be opened here January 31.

Finland Holds Fast

By Lynn Heinzerling,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Helsinki, Dec. 1. — Finnish successes against Russian attacks in bitter fighting on land and sea were reported tonight as a new government, headed by a banker, took up the little republic's struggle against the Soviet Union.

At least 3 women and children were reported killed in Helsinki today when Russian warplanes subjected the capital to a prolonged bombing and machine-gunning but elsewhere on the 800-mile Russian-Finnish frontier there were stories of destruction of Russian tanks, capture of Russian prisoners and increased Finnish resistance.

A Russian warship was reported sunk in the violent battle between Red warships and the Russaroe fortress at the strategic city of Hangoe, which guards the entrance to the Gulf of Finland. The fortress was still held by Finland tonight.

Said to Be Cruiser

[A Finnish radio broadcast reported the 8,500-ton Russian cruiser Kirow had been sunk off Hangoe, with 500 men aboard. Finnish sailors were quoted in the broadcast as saying Russian fire had been surprisingly weak.]

A defense ministry communique at midnight said the "warships were compelled to withdraw."

The communique added that on the land front there had been few Finnish casualties, but "large" Russian losses.

"Certainly 16 and perhaps 18 or more" Russian planes were shot down during the day, including several over Helsinki, the communique said, while "our air force suffered no losses at all."

The new premier, 50-year-old Risto Ryti, president of the Bank of Finland, declared in a special radio broadcast tonight to the United States that Finland would "never barter away the right to decide our own affairs." The speech was read for him by an assistant.

Associated with Ryti in the new cabinet are Vaino Tanner and Juhu Kusti Paasikivi, who dealt personally with Joseph Stalin at the Kremlin during the prolonged but vain negotiations over Russia's territorial demands.

Mrs. Roosevelt Hears Witness Sing Dies Song

She Takes Youths to Lunch Again After One Defends Communists

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Sarcastic doggerel, three moving-picture cameras and Mrs. Roosevelt were the stellar distractions at yesterday's hearing of the Dies Committee.

Joseph P. Lash, executive secretary of the allegedly Communist-dominated American Student Union, was on the stand throughout the session; and it was to hear him testify that Mr. Roosevelt made her third appearance as a spectator in the committee room.

She arrived before the hearing opened and remained until the end. Seated at the press table, she listened attentively, made a few notes and once during the testimony was observed laughing more or less silently to herself.

She Has Them to Lunch

Then, at the conclusion of the hearing, the First Lady repeated her action of the previous day by inviting to lunch at the White House the half-dozen members of the American Youth Congress and American Student Union who had come from New York to appear before the committee.

The movie cameras were trained upon Mrs. Roosevelt during most of the session; but greatly to the chagrin of the cameramen she turned her back when the spotlights went on and the machines began to whir.

The glare of the lights was so fierce that Representative Starnes, of Alabama, chairman of the subcommittee conducting the hearing, ordered that they be turned off, and it was at this juncture that Representative Mason (Republican), of Illinois, caustically observed that "this is no side show."

Lash Bursts Into Song

Lash, who said that Communists have "co-operated loyally" with the American Student Union, threw the audience into momentary uproar when he suddenly burst into song:

"If you see an un-American
Lurking far or near
Just alkalize with Martin Dies,
And he will disappear."

Asked what she thought of the testimony, Mrs. Roosevelt replied with a smile, "I'm not here to make any comment." The First Lady, however, has said she would appear as a witness if the committee asked her to do so.

At his press conference yesterday morning, President Roosevelt declared, in answer to a question, that continuation of the Dies Committee—whose life expires January 3 unless Congress prolongs it—was a matter for Congress to consider. The National Legislature has the right to set up a dozen such committees if it wants to, he said.

President Noncommittal

Although the Administration has been challenged by Dies to declare whether it is for or against the inquiry President Roosevelt refused to commit himself.

Representative Dies himself, chairman of the committee, was at his home resting, under doctor's orders. He was forced to cancel a speech in Detroit last night because of ill health.

The sub-committee hearings will continue today with testimony by Jay Lovestone, former general secretary of the Communist Party, who was expelled in 1929 after a bitter struggle over party tactics.

Under questioning of J. B. Matthews, the committee's director of research, Lash admitted in his testimony yesterday that Communists were active in the student union.

Won't Denounce Reds

The witness said "it would be the easiest thing in the world for me to denounce the Communists, especially since I'm in such disagreement with their policies." But, he added, "that would be unfair" because of their "cooperation" with the A. S. U. and with "the forces of democracy."

Lash later declared he would recommend that the A. S. U. at its convention this month denounce the Soviet invasion of Finland. He observed that the Communists in the union would defend the invasion "with arguments—and we'll have to answer them with arguments."

The witness said that the A. S. U.'s abandonment of the Oxford anti-war pledge "would have been more difficult," to accomplish if the Communists in the union had not lent their help.

Lash told the committee that Celeste Strack, who headed the union's work in the high schools on behalf of "peace strikes," was a Communist, and several of the union's officers at its origin in 1935 had been members of the National Students League allegedly Communist youth group which helped form the union.

U. S. Opens Drive On Counterfeiters

Washington secret service chiefs yesterday opened a nation-wide drive against counterfeiters out to take advantage of the Christmas rush season. Agents will pay special attention to passers in city department stores.

Millers Hit Wallace Plan For Parity Tax

Certificate Scheme, Described in Speech, Called Levy on Food

An appeal yesterday by Agriculture Secretary Wallace for enactment of a "streamlined" processing tax or production certificate levy drew immediate protest from wheat processors.

The Millers National Federation charged the plan would levy "a sales tax on an essential food, which the consumer will have to pay."

Wallace urged revival of the tax in a speech at Oklahoma City. He confirmed recent reports in The Post that a so-called certificate plan, a modern version of the old processing tax, is under AAA discussion.

"Farmers need some continuing sources of revenue to provide funds for price adjustment payments to farmers," Wallace said.

Wallace Explains Plan

"Such a tax will not be unfair to the consumer as long as the market price plus the tax is not above parity. City people have less right to kick against parity prices for farm products, even if attained by a processing tax, than farmers have to kick against manufacturing and handling margins and some other costs which are twice what they were in prewar days."

Wallace said there would be "obvious advantages" in the new certificate plan, which he briefly explained as follows:

"Under this proposal, farmers would get production certificates. Processors of cotton, for example, would be required to buy these certificates in order to sell their goods. The certificates would be equal in value to a certain number of cents per pound or bushel. The growers would sell their certificates to the processor, either directly or through a pool."

No Funds From Treasury

The Agriculture Secretary pointed out that the certificate plan would not require funds from the Treasury. He said it might permit a farmer to cash his certificates at the time he sold a crop, meeting current complaints against the length of time a grower must wait for his check.

If the plan is to be adopted, Wallace said, a good many details still must be worked out. At pesent it is being discussed only in connection with three commodities—cotton, wheat and rice. He said the AAA wants to work out a program fair to all commodities, and "perhaps a more general tax would raise the money needed for agriculture."

Opposing processing tax revival in any form, the Millers' National Federation last night cited official publications of the Agriculture Department in seeking to show that the Wallace proposal "will be burdensome to the consumers of wheat products."

Consumption Cut Feared.

"It is discriminatory legislation favoring untaxed foods," said the millers' statement. "It will result in decreased consumption of wheat."

The wheat processors said they have been conducting a program designed to increase consumption of wheat and wheat products.

"During the last crop year," their statement said, "the industry ground into flour approximately 50,000,000 bushels more wheat than it did five years ago when the processing tax was in effect. Part of this increase is due to the Government's program to encourage exports of flour, but the greater portion represents an increase in domestic consumption. A new tax on wheat will wipe out the constructive effort now being made to increase consumption."

Aliens May Lose Mexico Oil Plea

Mexico City, Dec. 1 (AP).—The Mexican Supreme Court indicated today that a decision would be reached early next week upholding the government's expropriation of the foreign oil industry.

Justice Jose Maria Truchuelo today closed a two-hour discussion of the aliens' appeal by saying:

"I shall deny their appeal to have the expropriation of their immovable properties declared unconstitutional and reversed by this court . . . I shall vote to grant them protection of the constitution and order their books, money and other movable objects be returned."

Sandburg Thinks U. S. Is 'Overly Self-Righteous'

By the Associated Press

Carl Sandburg, poet and Lincoln biographer, said he told President Roosevelt yesterday in a discussion of Russia's invasion of Finland that "nations, like individuals, are inclined to be overly self-righteous."

"Finland is one of the best-run democracies in the world," the white-haired author said, "and we are all naturally melancholy about what's happening in Finland.

"It's also a melancholy feeling we have when we look back into our own history and see a time when Congressman Abraham Lincoln and Senator Thomas Corwin, of Ohio, both lost their seats because they opposed an imperialistic war that we conducted against Mexico."

Gas Stations Sue Refinery For $339,232

Charge Company Cut Prices for Cab Association

Charging the American Oil Co. with granting unlawful price cuts on gasoline sold to favored customers, 14 Washington service stations sued in the District Court yesterday for triple damages totaling $339,232.

The service station suit also named as defendants three firms, General Finance, Inc., 2221 Fourteenth street northwest; City Cab Association, Inc.; Jack's Service Station, 3010 Rhode Island avenue, and three individuals, Jacob (Jack) Garson, Herbert Glassman and Edward O. Ostrow, company officials.

The complaint asserted that in 1936 the oil company made a "commercial consumers contract" to sell the cab association gasoline at a price 2½ cents a gallon less than the posted wagon price to other retail dealers, such as the plaintiffs.

Some of this cut-price gasoline was sold to the public through Jack's Service Station, the complaint added, which enabled the station to cut prices on other dealers and increase its sales. The station's turnover, the complaint said, rose from 10,000 to 15,000 gallons a month to 120,000 to 180,000 gallons.

The plaintiff stations asked triple damages under the Robinson-Patman act which makes it unlawful to make price discriminations among purchasers similarly situated.

Ickes' Man Quits in Okla. Dam Fight

Wright Resigns From Grand River Project In Split Over Policy

By the Associated Press

Vinita, Okla., Dec. 1.—Oklahoma's troubles over two Federally financed dam projects flared anew today with resignation of the man Secretary of Interior Ickes picked to manage the $20,000,000 Grand River power unit.

At the outset of a public ouster hearing on accusations brought by the State-controlled Grand River Dam Authority, R. V. I. Wright resigned as its $15,000-a-year general manager, saying:

"There was a question of policy involved. In the interests of the project this seemed the best way out of an impossible situation."

Davidson Takes Over

R. L. Davidson, of Tulsa, chief counsel for the dam board, was designated acting general manager.

The public hearing was requested by Wright when the authority formally charged him with "inefficiency" after previously declaring he was "unsatisfactory."

Accompanied by his counsel, W. A. Lybrand, Wright appeared for the session, but no testimony was taken.

Chairman Ray McNaughton, of the dam authority said the charges did not question Wright's honesty, or his competency as an engineer.

Lybrand then said that Wright "came to the job not as the voluntary selection of the board," but "at the insistence of Secretary Ickes.

Land Buying Lags

"He knows now you don't want him and he feels that she should not continue and try to force himself upon an employer who doesn't say he was corrupt and doesn't say he was incompetent. I have the authority, in the light of your statmen, to tender Mr. Wright's resignation."

The dam is nearing completion, but difficulty was encountered in obtaining land needed for the lake it will form. The board claimed that Wright was not obtaining land rapidly enough.

The retirement of three privates was approved by the Commissioners. James Kelley, former lieutenant and "father" of the police radio system, was retired because of physical disability. The others were Privates J. W. Hobbs, Twelfth Precinct, and B. F. Heard, Ninth Precinct.

U. S. May Lend Funds to Link Power System

Roosevelt Says RFC Can Finance Defense Plan if Banks Won't

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt, in a fresh outline of the Administration's power policy, asserted yesterday that if Wall Street money was not available the Government stood ready to lend funds to link private electric power systems as a defense measure.

Discussing the whole field of power at a press conference, the Chief Executive declared there was no immediate emergency in connection with the Nation's power supply.

He defended his 1938 proposal to create from seven to nine regional planning authorities in the Nation's watersheds similar in some respects to the Tennessee Valley Authority and said water-power development was a very minor phase of these plans.

Someone, he said, without identifying him, had deliberately perverted his message to Congress on that subject by saying the other day that there were to be nine power authorities. The President said he had human engineering more in mind than civil engineering.

By human engineering, he said, he meant soil erosion prevention, tree planting, highway and waterway development, and taking people in abject poverty and placing them in new industrialized areas where they could make a living.

Prompted By Conference

The discussion was prompted by a reporter's question about the series of conferences to start here next Tuesday between the Federal Power Policy Committee and representatives of 50 private power systems regarding methods of meeting the Nation's future power demands.

Officials already had denied that these conferences would go into the question of a national power grid under which the Federal steam "standby" plants would be established and private and public power booked for quick concentration of energy in event of a national emergency. The President was asked about this.

He replied that a lot of rot had been written about that. No such system was contemplated, he said, adding that standby plants would be needed only in event of war and since this country had no thought of going to war there was no need to talk about that now.

He said the immediate question was how to connect up a number of great power systems so energy could be shifted from one place to another as needed.

Private companies could build these links, he said, and if they could not obtain needed funds from Wall Street he suggested they see Jesse Jones, the Federal loan administrator.

Jones supervises the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which would do the lending.

Sees Power Aides

Secretary Ickes, chairman of the power policy committee, Leland Olds, vice chairman, and head of the Federal Power Commission, and Benjamin V. Cohen, committee counsel, saw Mr. Roosevelt after the press conference to take up with him next year's budget for the committee.

One purpose of the conferences beginning here next week with private power executives, Ickes said, was to recheck the confidential report drawn for the committee by Thomas R. Tate, chief of the power commission's gas and electric resources division.

Asked whether the proposed St. Lawrence waterway, covered in a new treaty now being negotiated with Canada, was involved in the regional planning proposal, Mr. Roosevelt said that was a separate question.

He added that when this was up before there was a question whether a large additional block of power was needed at the time. Today, with a definite upturn in manufacturing in this country and Canada, he said it looked as though more power could be developed by both countries in the St. Lawrence region. There was no actual shortage of power there, but a potential shortage, he said.

Labor Board Backs Firing In Sit-Downs

Goes Even Further Than Supreme Court to Outlaw Such Strikes

By the United Press

The National Labor Relations Board last night upheld the right of the Calmar Steamship Corporation, of Baltimore, Md., to dismiss seamen who engaged in a sit-down strike, and dismissed all charges that the company had violated the Wagner act.

The board went even further than the Supreme Court in the Fansteel Metallurgical Corporation case, and said that the Calmar company, a subsidiary of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, was justified in discharging and removing crew members of the National Maritime Union (C. I. O.) from ships where a general sit-down strike order was out, authough not in effect.

In the Fansteel case, the Supreme Court reversed an NLRB order directing reinstatement of 100 sit-down strikers.

Chairman J. Warren Madden and William M. Leiserson, President Roosevelt's latest appointee, joined in the majority ruling. Edwin S. Smith dissented in part, primarily from extension of the Fansteel doctrine.

The dismissed charges were filed by the N. M. U. and the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association (C. I. O.).

The case involved 10 of the company's 11 coastal trade ships, and the dispute began with a sit-down strike aboard the Oakmar at Baltimore, September 2, 1937. A general sit-down strike order by the union was issued September 7.

"As long as the general sit-down strike order remained unrescinded, we must regard the situation as a strike situation," the NLRB said.

"In the case of the Oakman and the Losmar, sit-downs actually occurred, and the respondent (company) resorted to the court to secure the removal of the N. M. U. crews from those two ships. In the case of the Calmar, with the general sit-down strike call still in effect and the crew of the Losmar still sitting down, the respondent avoided the necessity of applying to the court by preventing a sit-down. Under the peculiar circumstances of this case, we are of the opinion that its action in this respect was a measure to insure the operation of the ship during the strike and was not an unfair labor practice.

Proposed Decision Changed

"By so holding, we do not mean to imply that under other circumstances an employer may discharge employes because he fears they will engage in a sit-down strike."

Concerning other ships on which no sit-downs took place, although the strike order was out, the board said that "while it is true that no sit-down strikes were in progress at the time the crews of these ships were removed, we do not feel that the situation had so far changed that the respondent was not warranted in removing those crews to insure the operations of its ships."

The board changed its own proposed decision in sustaining the company's contentions.

Labor Must Have Voice in Peace, Winant Says

Havana, Dec. 1 (AP).—Labor regards peace as not the result of war but rather "a positive and living relationship among men and nations—good will formalized into foreign policy," John G. Winant, director of the International Labor Organization at Geneva, told the American Labor Conference today.

The acceptance of this concept, the former New Hampshire Governor continued, "automatically rejects the idea of trade based on unfair exploitation of raw materials and cheap labor without regard to social consequences."

He argued that organized labor must have a voice in peace settlements which will follow the war in Europe.

The establishment of an international institute for the financing of colonists and distributing them in the American countries was recommended in a resolution passed by the plenary session.

FCC Sees Telecast of District Scene by Mobile Equipment

A busy Washington street scene was flashed into the offices of the Federal Communications Commission yesterday, in a demonstration of new television equipment that engineers said is ready for immediate production in covering sports and news events.

The new mobile television transmitter was set up beside the Post-office Department Building at Thirteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest. One camera was placed near the street corner, a second on the roof of the building.

Upstairs, FCC Commissioners Fly, Thompson, Craven, Case and Brown watched and heard the transmission on two receiving sets, while other employes clustered around two more receivers in a nearby office.

They heard engineers describe the new equipment, and then the camera transmitting equipment was turned on with the special directional antenna. Later the ground camera cut out, and the one on the roof turned in a quick survey of the Washington skyline, picking out downtown business buildings and the Washington Monument.

Here the scene dropped back to the ground, and Ted Smith, announcer, invited everyone to come downstairs and look over the equipment.

The portable field equipment, engineers explained, was developed in the R. C. A. laboratories in Camden, N. J., and shown in public for the first time yesterday. A quantity-manufactured outfit, complete with three cameras, would weigh about 1,800 pounds and cost roughly $25,000. Its weight, officials said, is about one-tenth that of the present equipment, carried by two large vans, and its cost is about one-sixth.

3 Who Tarred Igor Cassini Fined $500

Prominent Virginians Held Guilty of Forming Mob and of Assault

By the Associated Press

Warrenton, Va., Dec. 1.—The tarring and feathering of Count Igor Cassini, chit-chat columnist for a Washington newspaper, resulted in conviction today of three socially prominent Virginians on a charge of constituting a mob and committing assault.

The verdict, returned by a Fauquier County jury after an hour and a half deliberation, imposed a fine of $300 on Ian Montgomery, 39, self-styled originator of the episode; a fine of $150 on his brother, Colin Montgomery, and a fine of $50 on Alexander Calvert.

When Foreman T. J. Huffman handed the verdict to Clerk T. E. Bartenstein it read guilty of "simple assault," but after the judge had questioned the jury as to whether the verdict meant guilty of constituting a mob and committing an assault it was rewritten and signed by the foreman.

Tarring Called "Public Service"

Under the indictment the jury had the discretion of convicting the trio of a felony carrying a penalty of one to ten years' imprisonment or of a misdemeanor carrying a penalty permitting fines up to $500, or of acquitting them.

Commonwealth's Attorney Clarence W. Carter charged in his closing argument that the defense counsel was asking the jury "to express your approval of mob violence" by acquitting the defendants. The prosecutor did not recommend any specific punishment.

State Senator Aubrey G. Weaver, a member of the defense staff, declared, "these young men have rendered a public service to this community."

Bodily Injury Denied

Cassini, 24-year-old grandson of a former Russian Ambassador to the United States, was forced into an automobile at the Warrenton Country Club in the early morning of June 25, driven into the country and tarred and feathered.

Ian Montgomery, who attempted in testimony to take full responsibility for the affair, said Cassini had written disparaging items about the Montgomery family and he wanted to learn the source of the count's information. He said he wished to "scare" Cassini so he would remain out of the community.

Cassini testified he was beaten and threatened with emasculation, but the defendants denied they did him any bodily injury.

Attack Called Vulgar

The defense based its case on testimony of Ian Montgomery that he alone was responsible for the affair and argued that under the court's description of a mob as a collection of three or more persons intending to commit assault and battery, the jury should acquit all three.

In one of the instructions, Judge J. R. H. Alexander told the jury that to convict it must believe the three defendants acted together.

Carter, and Charles Henry Smith, of Alexandria, who assisted in prosecution, argued that the fact Ian told his brother about the plan and that Calvert went along "as a witness" proved the three did constitute a mob.

"They subjected Cassini to indignities that to say the least were picturesque in their vulgarity," Smith declared. "The fact that Cassini is living today is no credit to the defendants."

Cassini Himself Blamed

Walter H. Robertson, of the defense, said Cassini was "responsible for what has happened" and that if he did not stop writing items which people of Fauquier considered of a ridiculing nature "something else worse will happen if somebody goes to the electric chair for it."

Weaver described Cassini's column as a "regular cesspool of scandal that creates a stench in the nostrils of decent people," and urged the jury "to establish the precedent here that you are going to keep out of this county this sort of scandal which brings you grief and humiliation.

"The pitcher went to the well once too often," he said, "and you had better not take it again or it won't be a fight with buttons."

This was a reference to one of Cassini's columns in which he wrote that he was a fencer and to his testimony Thursday that in fencing points of the foils were covered with button-like objects to prevent injury.

"Gossip" Column Ruled Out

The Commonwealth's attorney contended the case did not involve the question of approving or disapproving "gossip" columns and pointed out the court's instructions included the statement that neither spoken nor written words were justification for mob assault.

Cassini, who has been living in this country three years, has visited Warrenton frequently and on the night of the tarring was a guest in the home of Maj. and Mrs. Austin McDowell whose daughter he escorted to the country club dance.

Items to which the Montgomerys took exception, Ian testified, referred to the elder Montgomery's dancing and to the fact that their mother, Mrs. R. H. Montgomery, received an invitation to the British Embassy garden party last summer for the King and Queen while her husband did not.

Ian Montgomery testified that the liquid poured over Cassini's body was road oil which he obtained from a barrel beside the highway. The prosecution described the oil, however, as the worst kind of tar and pointed out it is used for cementing stone in road construction.

Aide Links Lepke To Narcotics Plot

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—An accused associate today placed Louis "Lepke" Buchalter in a position of high influence in an international syndicate which, the Government claims, schemed to smuggle $10,000,000 worth of narcotics into this country.

Testifying as a Government informer in the conspiracy trial of Lepke and three others, Nathan Gross, a codefendant who has pleaded guilty, declared positively that in May of 1936 when his brother-in-law and fellow defendant, David Dubbach, complained that he had not been paid for his services in gathering narcotics in Europe, it was to Lepke that Gross took the protest.

Mr. and Mrs. Melvyn Douglas Stand Firm for Roosevelt

Actor and Wife Speak Good Word For Migrant Workers ('Children All Blondes') and Bless Their Marriage

Not a single milloon-dollar blonde or a five-million-dollar smash-hit movie came in the talk yesterday with Hollywood stars Melvyn Douglas and Mrs. Douglas (Helen Gahagan), who keep married and happily.

Instead, their talk was full of sociology and their eyes were fixed on grapes of wrath. In their Shoreham Hotel suite, Douglas kept relaxed on his shoulder blades while saying:

"A group of us in the movie industry are devoted to the present Administration's policy. I think Mr Roosevelt enjoys more admiration out there now than he ever has. I would like those policies to be continued as they are. But I won't wish it on him (Mr. Roosevelt) again in these times . . ."

Mrs. Douglas was more animated, leaning forward, her eyes blazing. "Those who say the migrant worker conditions out there aren't bad . . . those who can't see it don't look," she was saying. "Easily, 75 per cent of them want work and will work."

"Mrs. Roosevelt is to be profoundly congratulated on her remarks about the Dies committee," Douglas said.

"Those children (of the migrant workers) are beautiful," Mrs. Douglas said. And they all—nearly all—are blondes. They're people that can't be lost or we're all lost."

"Good, fine faces," said Douglas. "No lesser breeds."

Mrs. Douglas was telling of a visit she made to one of the camps: There was one pump, and a mother was washing her baby's face from a bare inch of water in the bottom of a pan. Water was that scarce. "Let anyone not take a bath for a month and see how his spirit falls," she said.

"It is a universal thing, badly localized in California," said Douglas, who, incidentally, belongs to the State Relief Commission. It is all wound up in the country's economics; no particular organization is to blame; it had been experienced before this in Europe; it requires State and national attention, Douglas said.

Their views were one—tied in a tight knot. So is their marriage, they recalled, when the subject swung that way. "And in Hollywood, too," laughed Douglas. Man, there is no explanation for that. That's the grace of God."

Chest Is Still $127,359 Short Of Drive Goal

In the three days since the last Community Chest campaign meeting, 1,543 Washington givers have responded to the Chest's appeal with contributions amounting to $6,603, bringing the total to $1,872,641, a tabulation shows.

A deficit of $127,359, or approximately 6 per cent of the $2,000,000 goal for human needs still exists.

No further responses from the "big givers" have been reported through the Advance Gifts Unit. The pledges total 514 for an amount of $455,003, or 87.33 per cent of the unit quota.

Business firms and their employes contributing through the Group Solicitation Unit have turned in 419 pledges for $2,552, advancing the unit's total to $429,452, or 94.81 per cent of quota.

The Chest's closing audit will take place December 6.

Beale Street Plays Blues Gaily On Bill Handy's Home-Coming

Colored Composer, 66, Brings Battered Horn All the Way From Broadway and Toots It at Head of Triumphal Parade

By Brooks Smith
United Press Staff Writer.

Memphis, Tenn., Dec. 1.—Old Bill Handy came home to Beale street tonight and that dusty avenue with the catfish odor and 50,000 colored folk swayed and hummed with the rhythm of the blues.

It was homecoming for Old Bill, the 66-year-old colored composer who sat in a Beale street saloon 40 years ago and wrote the "St. Louis Blues," giving the world a new type of mean and moody music.

There was sentiment and music and laughter and gayety along the street tonight.

For Old Bill Handy brought along his battered brass horn all the way from Broadway—the same horn from which the blues songs first poured forth when Handy had his own jazz band in a Beale street honky-tonk and before he even dreamed that some day he'd be rich and a New York music publisher.

Several members of that original Handy band were here. Soon after the sun went down they led a parade down Beale street.

Handy was swinging and swaying as he led the band and there at his side was that drumming fool from the delta, Jasbow, a little man who beat the drums for Bill four decades ago and who was out to show that he had lost none of his skill.

Thousands of carefree, singing Negroes lined the street and shouted and danced.

It was a swell homecoming for Bill Handy. He said so himself.

Dope Sentences Stiffened Here; Five Convicted

Only One Placed On Probation; Four Peddlers in Group

Continuation of a trend toward more adequate punishment of dope peddlers in District Court was noted yesterday with the sentencing of five more drug law violators.

The Post, in a series of articles last month, cited Washington's rising illicit narcotics traffic and presented evidence that light sentences and the common use of probation are contributory factors.

Of five convicted defendants dealt with yesterday, only one was placed on probation. This was the case of Hazel Stern, 34, colored, mother of a 10-year-old child. Pleading guilty before Justice Peyton Gordon, she received a one to two year term and a $25 fine.

Justice Gordon sentenced Simon Lloyd, jr., 25, colored, to one to two years and prescribed a $50 fine. In the same court, Fong Kip, 26, drew a term of 18 to 24 months, the judge specifying that he should be treated for addiction in a special institution.

Naomi Jackson, 30, colored, received one to two years and a $100 fine on each of two cases. Ernestine Bullerd, 20, colored, was ordered to serve six to nine months and to pay a $20 fine. These two women were sentenced by Justice D. W. O'Donoghue.

The Bullerd woman was only a drug user, not a peddler, it was pointed out.

Woman Who Lived In $5-a-Week Room Leaves $532,000

Chicago, Dec. 1 (INS).—"More money than I ever laid eyes on," in the words of the family lawyer, was found today in the strong-box belonging to the late Mrs. Jeanette Lincoln, who was supposed to be in straitened circumstances when she died recently.

It consisted of $103,000 in cash, mostly in small bills—ones, fives and tens—and $150,000 in sound securities. Where it all came from is as much of a mystery as is the origin of the $279,000, most of it in $1,000 bills, which was found in another safety deposit box when it was opened last week.

Mrs. Lincoln was the widow of Willis L. Lincoln, a real estate man. After his death, Mrs. Lincoln lived with a Chicago family, one of whose members said today:

"She was sick and gave us to understand that she was poor. We believed it and took her in for $5 a week. We never saw her spend a dime for anything else. When she got worse she went to the hospital where she died."

Woman Beats Traffic Sentence With Post Stories

Fortified with The Post's recent articles on tangled District traffic, a woman yesterday defended herself against three charges in Traffic Court and won suspended sentences from Judge John P. McMahon.

Mrs. Lenna B. Meade, writer and former newspaper woman, charged with passing a red light, driving without a permit and failing to have District tags, spoke almost without pause for 45 minutes and read at times from The Post articles. While Judge McMahon alternately leaned back in his chair and sat up to attempt an interjection, Radio Station WOL permitted its Traffic Court program to run 17 minutes overtime to follow to completion one of the rarest shows in District court history.

Declaring she and others in court on traffic charges were "treated like Nazis," Mrs. Meade explained she came here from Florida in October and that no drivers' permits are required there. "All these traffic regulations baffle a native," she added, "to say nothing of a stranger."

Hall Indicted In Conspiracy To Defraud U.S.

Former Official of PRRA Accused of Concealing Data

Harry L. Hall, of Washington, former assistant administrator of the Puerto Rico Reconstruction Administration, was indicted Thursday by the Federal grand jury for conspiracy to defraud the Government, the Interior Department announced yesterday.

The indictment concerned construction of a cement plant for the PRRA at Catano, Puerto Rico, the department said. The M. A. Long Co. of Baltimore and Jose A. Ferre, of Puerto Rico were named with Hall.

Bids Weren't Advertised

Hall, Ferre and the M. A. Long Co. were charged with conspiracy to obtain for the Long Co. a contract to install machinery for the cement plant while Hall was employed in the Washington office of PRRA, the department said. For his part in the affair Hall was to receive $26,000, of which he was to give $7,000 to Ferre, it was charged.

The M. A. Long Co. submitted the only bid for the contract, which was first $621,580 and later cut to $572,312, according to the indictment. Interior Department officials yesterday said that by the notice of the opening of bids sent to the clerk of the department, the clerk was led to believe the contract involved a small sum, and therefore did not advertise it in the newspapers.

Investigation by the Interior Department of failures in the operation of the new plant followed immediately after the PRRA was brought under the department's control in August, 1937. Prior to that time Secretary Ickes had conferred with Ernest Gruening, administrator of the PRRA, about the plant.

Quit Under Pressure

The facts uncovered were laid before the Department of Justice, and the case was presented to the Federal grand jury at Baltimore.

Hall was employed as principal administrative officer of the Washington office of the PRRA from October 1, 1935, to May 15, 1937. His resignation on that date was said by his colleagues to have been under political pressure. Since that time he has been lobbying for Puerto Rican affairs, with an office in the Shoreham Building, the department reported.

Canada Plans To Have Its Own Air Force

Men Now Serving in R. A. F. Would Transfer To Separate Squadrons

By John MacCormac.
Copyright by New York Times

Ottawa, Ontario, Dec. 1.—Canada has decided to be represented in the air in this war under her own name. In the last war more than 40 per cent of the Royal Air Force consisted of Canadians.

Already there are a large number of Canadian pilots in the R. A. F. They have figured in daring exploits, and in the casualty lists.

It was announced today the Canadian government had represented to the British war office that a Canadian squadron should be formed immediately from personnel already serving in the R. A. F.

The decision indicates that the 10,000 airmen per year Canada expects to turn out under its empire training scheme will constitute a separate Canadian force.

A newspaper dispatch announcing Australia would substantially restrict imports from other than sterling countries yesterday brought the Canadian government its first intimation that Canada's export trade of $33,000,000 to her antipodean sister would be seriously affected by war emergencies.

After Australia has satisfied her essential needs in sterling countries, Ottawa has been assured she will buy the residue as far as possible in Canada.

Purchases in the United States will be restricted as far as possible to war essentials.

Russia's Real Goal Is India, Konitza Says

Holds Finnish Attack Aimed at Securing Defense Line in West

The Russian invasion of Finland is the preliminary to a Soviet assault on British India, Faik Konitza, former Albanian Minister to the United States, asserted here last night.

Konitza, whose mountainous homeland was overrun by the Italians in 48 hours last April, said, "I am horrified, as a human being, at what is happening to Finland. I feel the greatest sympathy for the brave, hard-working people of that country."

"As a student," he continued, "I believe Russia is looking to a future conflict with England. The Soviets are preparing their own Maginot Line, a series of positions to run from northern Norway down through Latvia to the Black Sea. They will stand on the defensive along that line while attacking India."

Stalin has no desire to occupy all Finland, according to Konitza. The Russian leader "is just like a street fighter," the former envoy said. "When he slips into a certain doorway it doesn't mean he wants to take over the whole house—he just wants to shoot from one of the windows."

Konitza doesn't believe in "the much advertised insincerity between Russia and Germany." Moscow and Berlin have agreed on their separate spheres of influence, he said, with all Asia assigned to Stalin.

"The story is not yet finished," the Albanian diplomat observed, "but if Stalin succeeds in his present plan, he may emerge as the most intelligent leader of our generation."

Konitza spoke with contempt of Italian policy. "Mussolini is just lying in wait to see whose foot is slipping, and then he will jump on the weaker party's back. That's the usual thing with Italy, you know.

"But Italy won't make much difference," he added. "The real question is—how strong is Russia?"

Film Shows Death and Fire As Warsaw Is Destroyed

Julien Bryan, One of Last Americans to Leave Polish Capital, Gives Lecture With Movies on How Hundred Thousand Died

Julien Bryan, one of the last American newsmen to leave Warsaw, came to Washington yesterday with a picture-tale of horror.

Last night in Constitution Hall he showed movies and colored slides made during three weeks of bombardment. Pictures of sudden death and fire, pictures of airplanes and refugees, pictures of the destruction of a city of more than a million inhabitants, of which a hundred thousand died.

Before his lecture Bryan received reporters at the National Geographic Society to explain some of the details of the bombardment and show some of the pictures not included in his lecture—a few of them because they were too horrible.

"There is no moral in the story," he said "Audiences don't applaud my lecture. It would be like applauding a funeral. I think half of the audience usually comes out all steamed up and ready to go to war to stop such brutality; and the other half resolved that if war is like that nothing can ever justify it."

Bryan arrived in Warsaw a few days after the war began after making educational films in the Netherlands and Switzerland. He intended to take pictures "behind the lines," but the "lines" caught up with him; and he finally left with the diplomatic corps in the "truce" of September 21.

"About a third of the city is down flat," he said; "A third is still standing but badly damaged, and the remaining third can be lived in when holes are patched up.

"In the last two weeks there was a constant barrage. The Germans were after the main thoroughfares; they wanted to stop traffic, because there were soldiers moving on them. But naturally the civilians were there, too.

"All Poland was a military objective."

Air raids turned out to be less effective than the world had expected Bryan pointed out. In spite of attacks so frequent that after the first two weeks the sounding of air raid alarms was stopped, the planes were not able to disrupt the Warsaw electricity, gas and water. It was left to the artillery to decimate the population.

tives, including seven rookies, carried out their assignments in an orderly fashion so that the 4 p. m. street crowds did not realize what was taking place inside the stores.

Jack J. Angel, 35, of the 1700 block of Hobart street northwest, arrested at the I street address, was charged with setting up a gaming table, with operation of a lottery and possession of lottery slips, and with carrying a concealed weapon. He will be arraigned on the first three charges today before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage, and on the fourth before the District Police Court.

Few Familiar Faces

Charges of setting up a gaming table, operation of a lottery and possession of lottery slips were placed against James E. McGroary, 45, of the 1200 block Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Seven others were charged with setting up a gaming table. They gave their names and addresses as Hugh F. Gallagher, 38, of 1100 block Fourteenth street northwest; Ralph Smith, 47, of the 300 block Todd place northwest; Garrett F. Quinn, 35, of the 5000 block Dana place northwest; George A. Galleher, 39, of the 900 block Virginia avenue southwest; Carl Mehrstedt, 50, of the 500 block Twelfth street northwest; Clifton R. Beane, 42, of the 1100 block 1 street northwest; Garner S. Barbour, 42, of the 1300 block Allison street northwest.

The raids followed an intensive two-month investigation by undercover detectives. Police said there were few familiar faces among the suspects and expressed belief a new outfit was running the race-bet racket here.

Among the funds seized by the raiders were many Government checks. Several of the wager slips confiscated had the initials of the Internal Revenue Bureau accountant, police said.

Senate Upholds War Powers Of Daladier

French Premier Calls For Unity, Promises To Quell Communists

By P. J. Philip

Paris, Dec. 1.—The Senate this afternoon voted to amend the law on organization of the country in time of war so as to give the government plenary powers with delayed parliamentary control. Of the 282 members of the upper house only 23 voted against the bill.

The spokesmen of the army and finance commissions, Col. Jean Fabry and Abel Gardey, gave their full support to the measure and Col. Fabry said that at a time like this "no guilty-propaganda could be tolerated."

Gardey told the reluctant senators that the powers the government was asking would be used only in case of "absolute necessity."

In a public session Premier Daladier repeated the promises he had made before the commission. He told the Senate that he did not seek in any way to diminish the prerogatives of Parliament, but only to be able to work quickly and secretly whenever it appeared necessary for national defense.

Only Socialists Dissent

Only Socialists voted against the bill and their spokesman took care to insist that in doing so they did not wish in any way to weaken the government or imperil the union and the final victory of France.

Daladier tonight pledged France to a finish fight in a nation-wide broadcast which was rebroadcast in the United States, and called for national union.

"You have learned how Germany stands in a common front with a country whose system she formerly decried as an abomination," Daladier said. "Germany concluded a treaty with Communist Russia and we are now witnessing the results of that pact.

"There are many people in France who have accepted the views of the Communist preachers. They are traitors to our nation, and, as such, will be prosecuted with all the power at our command."

Daladier said German propaganda to separate France from England was doomed to failure.

"In this struggle we are of one mind with the British people," he added.

Blast on U. S. Sub Hurts 4 Sailors, Wrecks Generator

Manila, P. I., Dec. 1 (INS).—A battery explosion in a United States submarine lying at the Olongapa Navy Yard seriously damaged the craft and caused injuries to four members of the crew, it was learned tonight.

Navy authorities admitted the explosion had occurred but denied it had caused serious damage. They discounted sabotage and insisted the injured had been only slightly hurt. It was reliably reported, however, that one of the sailors was in a critical condition.

It was learned the blast wrecked the submersible's generator and repairs must await arrival of material from the United States.

Six submarines of Battle Squadron 14 arrived today to reinforce the Asiatic Fleet.

Today's Best Laugh

The Daily Worker, Communist daily, yesterday turned to Wall Street for proof that Soviet relations with Finland aren't so bad after all.

The Communist paper pointed out that "Finnish bonds fell a mere ten points in the market on the announcement of Soviet military operations in Finland," whereas "bonds of Poland became worthless the very day that Germany invaded Poland."

Church Confirms Report Navy Seeks Anti-U-Boat Nets

By the Associated Press

Representative Church (Republican), of Illinois, said yesterday he had received official confirmation of reports that the Navy intends to ask Congress for funds for anti-submarine nets to protect some of the nation's harbors and fleet anchorages.

Asserting the confirmation came from Charles Edison, Acting Secretary of the Navy, Church suggested that "perhaps the Administration has also concluded, as so many predicted, that the repeal of the arms embargo would bring the war closer to our shores."

Russia Takes Exhibit From New York Fair

1940 Participation Canceled, Building Is Ordered Demolished

Copyright by New York Times

New York, Dec. 1.—Russia has withdrawn from the 1940 New York World's Fair, and its pavilion, a magnet for attention and center of controversy at the 1939 exposition, must be razed within 90 days, fair officials announced today.

Following receipt of orders from Moscow, which gave no explanation for the withdrawal, the fair issued a permit today authorizing the Russians to begin demolition of their pavilion, one of the largest, costliest, and most ornate structures in the entire foreign area.

The fair said it understood that the marble, granite and steel building, topped by the now-famous statue of a worker holding aloft a red star, would be dismantled and shipped back to Moscow where it would be reassembled.

Outside of confirmations of the withdrawal and discussion of the details, there were no explanations forthcoming, either from fair or Soviet officials.

It was stated by the Fair, however, and confirmed by the Russians, that the Soviet decision not to participate in the 1940 exposition was cabled here several days ago, before Russia actually went to war with Finland.

Nazis Claim Direct Hits

Berlin, Dec. 1 (U.P.).—Germany claimed today that Nazi planes scored seven direct hits on one cruiser and also hit three others in a raid on the British fleet in the North Sea Saturday.

(The British Admiralty on Saturday admitted that German planes made two attacks on the fleet, but denied that any ships had been hit or that there had been any casualties. Authoritative British naval circles reiterated the denial today.)

London (Saturday), Dec. 2 (U.P.).—The Norwegian steamer Realf was rent by an explosion Thursday night and 44 survivors were landed in a town on the English east coast Friday night, it was announced today.

The survivors were picked up by the Italian steamer Santigati 90 minutes after the Realf was abandoned. The third mate was the only member of the crew lost.

Pius Deeply Shocked; Italian Press Blames British Anti-Nazi Policy

Copyright by New York Times

Vatican City, Dec. 1.—Russia's invasion of Finland has so deeply shocked Pius XII, according to high Vatican circles today that he will shortly issue a strong condemnation of Bolshevism.

The Osservatore Romano, Vatican organ, prints an editorial by Dalla Torre in which it says that the myth of "moralist Bolshevism" has collapsed. The editorial condemns Russia's policy as devoid of a moral standard and stresses the complete lack of any excuse for the aggression.

"The hostilities," it says, "started when a conciliatory note reached Moscow which disregarded it, as it had disregarded the American offer of mediation. This meant that Moscow was, and declared itself, to be wrong."

Italy Blames Allies

By Herbert L. Matthews.

Copyright by New York Times.

Rome, Dec. 1.—Italians today showed even more hostility than yesterday toward Russia for her invasion of Finland, but the official attitude remains unexpressed.

An example of the reasoning which holds England responsible for what has happened is to be found in "Blackshirt's" comment in the Resto del Carlino.

"We do not hesitate an instant in affirming that the Russo-Finnish conflict constitutes a new and very grave blow to London's prestige."

"For what happened today," the Regime Fascista writes, "is exclusively England's and France's fault for having forced Germany to compromise herself and make concessions to her natural enemy (Russia)."

By coincidence, these attacks on England occur the same day as the new British Institute has been inaugurated in Rome by British Ambassador to Rome Sir Percy Loraine and Lord Lloyd.

Japan Keeps Silence

By Hugh Byas.

Copyright by New York Times.

Tokyo, Dec. 1.—While the Japanese press sympathizes with Finland, a foreign office spokesman today firmly refused to say a word which might have indicated the Japanese government's view.

Japanese press dispatches from China have created the impression that the Soviet is open to make a bargain with Japan, strengthening the arguments of those Japanese who advocate an agreement with Russia and a complete break with England and America.

Meantime, however, the new naval base at Maizuru in the Japan Sea, 465 miles southeast of Vladivostok, was reopened today, after 17 years of disuse. It is an important part of Japan's defenses against Russia.

Vice Admiral Goro Hara was appointed commander.

Kansas City Jury Indicts Contractor

Kansas City, Dec. 1 (AP).—John J. Pryor, favored contractor of Tom Pendergast's Democratic political machine, was indicted today by a Federal grand jury on charges that he and his three companies evaded income taxes on $1,686,389.

An income tax evasion indictment sent Pendergast to Leavenworth Penitentiary for 15 months and similar charges forced three of his lieutenants to join him there.

Garbo, Fearing War, Brings Family to U.S.

GRETA GARBO

Mother, Brother and His Wife Join Star On Coast Estate

By International News Service

Hollywood, Dec. 1.—The family of Greta Garbo, film beauty, has fled Sweden and is living in the star's $75,000 mansion near suburban Inglewood, it was learned today.

Garbo brought her family to America for fear the Russo-Finnish war might soon spread to all Scandinavian countries, it was reported.

Living with the star are her mother, Anna Greta Gustafson; her brother, Sven, and his wife, Anna, on the estate formerly occupied by C. S. Howard, wealthy sportsman and owner of Kayak II, Seabiscuit and other famous race horses.

Mrs. Gustafson and her son and daughter-in-law arrived in New York several days ago on the Norwegian steamer Stavensfjord, and flew immediately to Hollywood, it was learned. The family's arrival indicates Garbo will not visit her Swedish home until hostilities have ceased.

Mrs. Gustafson had been living in an apartment building purchased by her famous daughter in Stockholm. Sven, who has been employed in the Stockholm exchange office of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, discoverers of Garbo, probably will seek connections with the Hollywood studios, it was understood.

Hollywood's curiosity had been excited over Garbo's house-hunting expeditions, particularly in view of her friendship with Dr. Gaylord Houser, dietitian. Dr. Houser denied any marriage plans, stating he and Garbo were merely good friends. The family's arrival accounts for the house search, it was assumed.

Guerrilla War Is Called Best Hope of Finns

French and Germans Trade Shell Fire South of Saarbruecken

By G. H. Archambault.

Copyright by New York Times

Paris, Dec. 1.—Military circles here as yet are unable to discern any coordinated plan of action on the part of the Soviet sea, land and air forces in Finland beyond the destruction of relatively easy objectives.

The best hope for the Finns is seen in a resort of guerrilla warfare.

There is still much speculation regarding an eventual extension of the theaters of the war. Such speculation finds support in Premier Daladier's insistence in his broadcast tonight on a considerable strengthening of the French lines of defense to be achieved in three months.

French Return Shells

In the meantime, the Germans have been shelling areas south of Saarbruecken and the French replied in kind. In the Apach sector near the Luxemburg border the enemy attempted a raid on an outpost, but the detachment of 60 men withdrew under machine-gun fire.

Today's French G. H. Q. communiques follow:

"No. 177 (morning). Some artillery fire during the night. Last evening we repulsed an enemy raid."

"No 178 (evening). Skirmishes between patrols at various points, together with reciprocal artillery actions."

It was learned today that the sinking of a German submarine, reported in yesterday's communique, was the work of a French torpedo boat on convoy duty. The submarine came within firing distance of the convoyed freighters, when her periscope was sighted. The captain of the torpedo boat made straight for the U-boat and dropped depth charges.

Brauchitsch Goes to Front

Berlin, Dec. 1.—Col. Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, commander in chief of the German army, left for the West Front today. It is stated that he will inspect troops on the upper Rhine.

The German army communique today reports only slight local patrol and artillery activities. German patrols reconnoitered at Mandern, in French territory southeast of Perl, and reported the town unoccupied.

Four German flying boats were forced to land on the North Sea by a heavy storm. The planes were lost but the crews were reported to have been picked up by Norwegian freighters, and all were saved.

Diplomats at Moscow See U. S. Acting to Halt Soviet

Other Envoys Speculate as Steinhardt Spends Hours With Molotoff; Threat To Cancel Trade Pact Is Rumored

By G. E. R. Gedye

Copyright by New York Times

Moscow, Dec. 1.—United States Ambassador Lawrence A. Steinhardt returned to Moscow at mid-day today but the note requesting both parties to refrain from bombing civilian centers which was announced last night was not presented by Steinhardt until 10 o'clock tonight.

Diplomatic circles believed he was presenting instructions recalling him because of the invasion of Finland but the embassy stated categorically, "we know nothing about any such instructions, although we have heard rumors."

Steinhardt, however, had a long interview with Premier Molotoff, lasting more than an hour, probably near two hours and a half.

Although the official position of the embassy is that Steinhardt went only to deliver a note, obviously long outdated by subsequent developments which could anyway have been delivered before his return, there is speculation his errand was far more important. Such formal notes are received by Vladimar P. Potemkin, vice commissar of foreign affairs, and not by Molotoff, personally, at the Kremlin.

Moreover, Molotoff broke off an important conference with another foreign ambassador, arranged long in advance, because of the urgency of Steinhardt's visit.

Before seeing Molotoff, Steinhardt, although he declined other appointments on the plea of urgent business, had a long interview with Finnish representatives. Diplomatic circles are following Steinhardt's actions with closest attention and believe he returned here with specific instructions of the greatest importance, either to warn the Soviet Union he would be withdrawn or that the United States-Soviet commercial agreement would be denounced in event of pursuit of the campaign against Finland.

neighbors are up in arms" he added.

Harry N. Stull, new president of the federation, was cagey when questioned about the matter.

"Now look here," he said, "this is my first meeting. I have to proceed cautiously and have no idea what we will do with this subject."

Brentwood and Woodridge residents were indignant.

"How would you like to be startled into wakefulness at 2 a. m. by a calf screaming for its mamma?" an irate citizen demanded. "Well, it's no joke."

It wouldn't be so bad if the cattle were just fed and then taken away, Perry pointed out.

"The cattlemen hang around for hours and the cows bellow and moan," he asserted. "It goes on, usually, from shortly after midnight until 1 a. m. or 2 a. m.

"We've tried to get officials to take legal action against this nuisance, but there seems to be no regulation to control it."

His association, consequently, has gone on record favoring a police regulation "prohibiting the parking of livestock in any part of the District of Columbia which would constitute a nuisance to adjoining property owners."

Perry emphasized that while the cattle were annoying, the nuisance was aggravated in summer when windows were open.

In hot weather, he said, coops of chickens are removed from trucks while the birds are fed. The chickens, wakened by floodlights at gas stations and sandwich shops, cackle and crow and keep the neighborhood awake.

"We object to feeding the chickens within 50 feet of houses," Perry asserted, "because the odor from the coops is most objectionable and residents near the avenue believe the situation a menace to hea[illegible]."

Soviet State Reported Set Up in Finland

Regime Invites Aid Of Red Army, Says Moscow Dispatch

By Witt Hancock,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Dec. 1.—Establishment of a "people's" government for Finland, which "invites" Russia's Red army to help it overthrow the present Finnish regime, and formation of the first corps of a new army in Finland were proclaimed tonight by Russia.

The announcement was made by the Moscow radio, which broadcast a statement made earlier by Tass, Soviet official news agency, telling of the formation of the new government.

The plan outlined in the broadcast and Tass' announcement indicated Moscow envisioned a Soviet state in Finland.

Chauffeurs Called Up

At the same time it was learned that more Red troops had been called to the colors with a special call for chauffeurs.

The new Finnish government announced by Russia was headed by Otto Kusinnen, who was one of the founders of the Communist Party in Finland and who was commissar of education during the brief bolshevik uprising there in 1918.

The Tass announcement said that besides Kusinnen the following "entered the people's government:"

Mauri Rosenberg, finance minister; Aksel Antila, defense; Tuure Lehen, internal affairs; Armas Ejkija, agriculture; Inkeri Lehtinen, education, and Paawo Prokonen, minister on Karelia affairs.

Kusinnen on Comintern

Kusinnen, also named minister of foreign affairs, is a member of the central committee of the Finnish Communist Party and is one of the Comintern (Communist International) secretaries.

The Tass message from Leningrad said the government was organized by "representatives of the left parties and of soldiers who revolted against the present government."

The new government was described as provisional, scheduled for reorganization on a permanent basis after its forces had marched on and conquered Helsinki, the capital, with the help of the Red army. Some of the Finnish army already has joined the new government, said the announcement.

Estates to Be Seized

It could not be "a state of the Soviet type" before this reorganization, it asserted. After the reorganization, however, the estates of large landowners would be seized and distributed among peasants having no land as one feature of a nine-point program of drastic economic change.

The new government would have a "pact of mutual assistance" with Russia.

What Tass published was a "declaration of the people's government of Finland," which it said was "received by radio and translated from the Finnish."

The government was reported formed at Terijoki, a Finnish town 10 miles from the Russian border, on the Karelian Isthmus, where Russian infantry troops first entered Finland Thursday morning.

(A dispatch from Helsinki said the reported formation of the insurgent government drew only sardonic laughter in the Finnish capital.)

Soviet Cruiser Sunk, Finns Say

Aimo K. Cajander, was named foreign minister while Passikivi, a former premier and long experienced in dealing with Russia, was given the post of minister without portfolio.

Cajander and former Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko, who were assailed by Russia as inimical to the Soviets, were dropped.

In re-shuffling the cabinet Ryti held over six ministers from the Cajander cabinet. Besides Tanner, former finance minister now foreign minister, they were:

Juho Niukkanen, retained as minister of defense; Dr. J. O. Soedderhjelm, retained as minister of justice; Ernst von Born, new interior department head and former minister without portfolio; Uuno Hannula and Pekka Villa Heikkinen, retained as ministers of education and agriculture, respectively.

M. Pekkala was named to the finance post, succeeding Tanner; B. Kotelainen was given the commerce position; K. Fagerholm heads the social welfare ministry and R. von Fieandt was made minister of public works.

[Premier-Foreign Commissar Molotoff declared in Moscow that substitution of a "Tanner government" for the resigned Finnish cabinet "unfortunately does not improve matters" between Russia and Finland.

["Tanner was, and undoubtedly remains, the evil genius in Soviet-Finnish negotiations," Molotoff said. "The Soviet Union expects no good from Tanner's government. Besides, the formation of a new government of Finland, a people's government headed by (Otto) Kusinnen, causes the Soviet government to hope for a peaceful and satisfactory solution of the present crisis."

Arctic Port Taken

[Capture of the Finnish Arctic port of Petsamo, advances of the Soviet Russian army as far as 16 miles into Finland and the downing of ten Finnish airplanes were reported in a Red army communique.

[The communique, issued by Tass, charged that retreating Finnish troops were burning villages and "forcibly taking away the population."—Editor's note.]

The Finnish capital went through the heaviest aerial attack of the 2-day-old invasion this afternoon and two other air raid alarms—which were followed by no bombing—were sounded as flames spread through the capital.

Helsinki's police chief said the 30 women and children were killed in the working class district by Soviet bombs during the afternoon raid.

A railway warehouse was demolished.

There was no bombardment of Helsinki by Soviet warships, but the air and naval bombardment of Hangoe was described as extreme and it was expected Soviet forces might attempt a landing to reduce the stubborn fortress there.

What was described as a "tremendous" Soviet attack along the southeastern border was reported repulsed by Finnish troops, with hundreds of Russians taken prisoner and a heavy loss of life on the Soviet side.

Sixteen Russian tanks were wrecked by mines or gunfire in this engagement, military authorities said.

The defense ministry communique said that while the Hangoe Fort was not damaged, the naval bombardment set fire to two towns on the Island of Suursaari in the Gulf of Finland. A motorboat with four coast guards attempting to leave the Island of Seiskari was sunk by a warship and the four were killed.

Of the warfare on the frontier, the communique said:

"During the course of the day, there were three battles along the whole frontier. News from north of Lake Ladoga indicates the Russian troops were active there.

"Suojarvi has been the center of the heaviest attack, where enemy losses were heavy. Finnish machine-gun fire annihilated two enemy companies to the last man.

"South of Myllyjarvi, the advancing enemy was thrown back by heavy counter fire."

(However, a Finnish reverse was reported in the far north.

(Soviet troops dropped to earth in parachutes from large airplanes were said to have captured Petsamo, the republic's chief Arctic Ocean port. Petsamo and the town of Liinahamari were reported in flames from repeated air raids. About 600 refugees from the beleaguered northern part of Finland were said to have crossed the border into Norway.)

Helsinki was not the only object of Soviet airmen. Their low-flying planes bombed principal ports on Finland's south coast, particularly Viborg and Kotka, about 65 miles east of Helsinki, and also struck at Abo (Turku), on the west coast and 250 miles from the Russian frontier.

Ten bombers were said to have been shot down at Viborg.

It was reported, without confirmation, that civilians in Abo were machine-gunned as others were in Helsinki.

There were no estimates of the air raid casualties in Finland.

In Helsinki, Finnish antiaircraft guns were said to have shot down several raiding planes.

Estonian Bases Used

One captured Soviet pilot carried Estonian money, authorities said, tending to corroborate their belief that air attacks on the capital were coming from nearby bases in Estonia, gained by Russia through concessions granted in October.

During the afternoon, Russian fliers dropped handbills containing a Finnish translation of a speech by Russia's Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff saying he could not deal with the Cajander government.

Neutrals in Helsinki fled to outlying sections or sought to leave the country as the invasion continued.

Approximately 200 Americans, Britons and other foreigners took refuge at Grankulla, a small town about 10 miles west of Helsinki, where H. F. Arthur Schoenfeld, United States Minister to Finland, established emergency headquarters.

A German steamer was reported en route to Helsinki to remove Germans.

About 80 Russians have been interned by the Finns.

The Finnish communique said further:

"North of Lake Ladoga, enemy attacks were launched wherever the roads permitted. From all appearances these attacks have been the result of careful preparation for at least two weeks . . . our own troops reported some casualties but not a single fatality.

"Also on the Karelian Isthmus there was heavy activity. The Russians resumed attacks under cover of artillery fire. Only at scattered points was there any degree of success for the Russians. Generally they were beaten back with large losses.

Claim Many Tanks

"The Russians continue to lose many tanks. During the forenoon today at least eight tanks on the Karelian Isthmus front alone were destroyed."

The communique mentioned three air raid alarms at Helsinki, one of which was followed by an actual bombing raid. It reported two raiders shot down, "one a bimotored bomber in the northern part of the city while another fell in south harbor."

Unconformed reports described the destruction of two other Russian planes over Helsinki.

"Anti-aircraft guns dropped one enemy plane at Laapreeranta and two at Tainiomoski." The communique contmued.

"At Ruckalahti our own planes shot down two enemy machines and at Koljola forced down another."

Official sources commented on the Moscow proclamation of the formation of the insurgent "people's" government at Terijoki under the leadership of the Soviet Finns Otto Kusinnen and Mauri Rosenberg with the statement that Terijoki actually still was in the possession of Finnish troops.

(The Russian communique asserted Terijoki had been captured.)

Finland will try to reach an agreement with Soviet Russia "if possible," the new Finnish foreign minister, Tanner, said tonight, but, he added firmly, "our aim is to defend our independence and our safety.

"I can understand if you are astonished that the government which yesterday received a unanimous vote of confidence has resigned," he said at a press conference.

"The reason for the resignation was that we thought the situation was so serious we should have a government we could call a national government, with all parties included."

Tanner said the government intends to remain at Helsinki "as long as possible. We don't think they can occupy Helsinki. The only danger is that which comes from the skies."

Fears Soviet Air Power

Baltimore, Dec. 1 (AP).—Capt. U. F. Anderson, master of the steamer Kronoborg, flagship of the Finnish merchant marine fleet, expressed belief today that Russia's air power would give it a quick victory over Finland.

"With Russia able to put thousands of planes in the air, she can quickly destroy our cities and blast our infantry to pieces," Capt. Anderson said in an interview.

"But if she met us with infantry," he added, "even though she could bring up 1,500,000, Finland would put up a long and possibly successful fight."

Four Marine Corps Colonels Named Brigadier Generals

Vandegrift Harrington Rowell Marston

President Approves Selection of Marston, Harrington, Rowell and Vandegrift; 19 Lieutenant Colonels Are Advanced

Four Marine Corps colonels, all well-known in Washington, were selected yesterday for promotion to brigadier generals.

President Roosevelt approved the report of a selection board, headed by Maj. Gen. James C. Breckinridge, choosing the four colonels and 19 lieutenant colonels for advancement to colonel.

The officers placed on the brigadier promotion list—they will actually advance in the next few months—are:

Col. Ross E. Rowell, naval and naval air attache at Havana, Cuba, and former director of marine aviation here. He is the first flier to reach general's rank in the Marines.

Col. John Marston, former commander of Marine forces in northern China, and now in charge of recruiting at Chicago.

Col. Samuel M. Harrington, chief of staff at the Quantico, Va., Marine base.

Col. Alexander A. Vandegrift, military secretary to the commandant of Marines.

Six of the lieutenant colonels selected for promotion are stationed here. They are Lieut. Cols. Lloyd L. Leech, William C. James and Samuel C. Cumming, stationed at Marine Headquarters; Frank Whitehead, an instructor at the Army Industrial College; Robert Blake, Office of Naval Intelligence, and Clifton B. Cates, attending the Army War College.

Five Quantico officers were chosen: Lieut. Cols. Raphael Griffin, David L. S. Brewster, Lemuel C. Shepherd, jr., Alfred H. Noble and Graves B. Erskine.

The remainder selected are Samuel A. Woods, jr., John M. Arthur, James T. Moore, Thomas E. Bourke, LeRoy P. Hunt, Leo D. Hermle, Charles I. Murray and Gilder D. Jackson, jr.

condemn this new resort to military force as the arbiter of international differences.

"To the great misfortune of the world, the present trend to force makes insecure the independent existence of small nations in every continent and jeopardizes the rights of mankind to self-government. The people and government of Finland have a long, honorable and wholly peaceful record which has won for them the respect and warm regard of the people and Government of the United States."

There was a feeling in some authoritative circles last night that should the Russian attacks and bombings continue for the next few days, the President could be expected to sever relations with Moscow, but that if they cease, consideration of such a step will be abandoned.

Mr. Roosevelt yesterday discussed the foreign situation with several Congressional leaders, who declined to reveal the nature of the conversations.

Senator Pittman, of Nevada, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, one of those consulted, would only say that he approved the President's appeal to Russia and Finland to refrain from bombing civilians.

Borah Against Break

Senator McNary, of Oregon, Republican leader in the Senate, was another with whom the President discussed the situation.

Chairman May, of the House Military Affairs Committee, declared to reporters:

"If I were President, I would serve notice on Russia to get out of Finland immediately, and if they failed to I would break off relations."

"Senator Borah, of Idaho, ranking Republican on the Foreign Relations Committee, condemned the invasion of Finland as "damnable," but pointed out that American severance of relations with Russia would not help the Finns in any way.

He cautioned that when the time comes for reestablishing peace the United States should be in a position to have a "commanding voice."

"I feel," he said, "that we can best serve the cause of peace and best preserve the rights of humanity by making every reasonable effort to maintain normal relations with all warring powers."

However, Chairman Dies of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities declared that at the session of Congress opening next month he will offer a resolution calling for a break with the Moscow regime.

While President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull were withholding official decisions on suggested actions, interest centered in the unofficial plane embargo.

Activity of the Russian agents seeking to buy American fighting aircraft was called to the attention of the Joint Army and Navy Aeronautical Board by manufacturers who had been approached with offers to purchase.

The board has recently issued instructions that such approaches by foreign buyers be reported to Washington.

Legally, the Government has no grounds on which to stop such sales unless the Army and Navy have recently bought craft of the same types, but it can let the manufacturers know that contemplated transactions will arouse official displeasure.

Hull May Act

Assistant Secretary of War Johnson declined to discuss the matter further than to say that no planes have been sold to the Russians.

There were reports that Secretary Hull contemplated addressing to plane manufacturers an appeal that they refuse to sell planes to countries which conduct air bombings of civilians. In the summer of 1938 the Secretary took such action after repeated denunciations of Japanese bombing of Chinese civilians had been disregarded by the Japanese war heads.

Manufacturers complied readily and Japan's supply of American aircraft was immediately cut off.

Despite poor communication facilities yesterday brought a report from the American Legation in Helsinki that it was evacuating numerous Americans from the Finnish capital to the legation's emergency quarters at Badgrankulia.

Still later the American Minister, H. F. Arthur Schoenfeld, reported that the minister of the interior in a radio speech to the nation at noon said that there was calm throughout the whole country, and that evacuation was proceeding smoothly.

Schoenfeld added that the calm of the public was impressive and that remarkable patience was noticeable everywhere. He described the temper of the public as admirable, despite severe hardships and approaching winter.

Soviets Expect To Crush Finns In Six Weeks

By G. E. R. Gedye.
Copyright by New York Times

Moscow, Dec. 1.—On the assumption that the Soviet Union is capable of carrying out combined military and naval operations on a large scale, it is estimated here that the Finns might be crushed within six weeks.

Assuming the Russians are only partially successful in their landing operations the Finns could maintain organized resistance for at least six months and perhaps longer.

On both the Finnish and Russian side there is intense national hatred, in addition the memory of the conflict 20 years ago when both Whites and Reds regularly shot prisoners by the thousands.

Foreign military experts consider Finland's best chance is not to attempt to maintain any kind of rigid defence, but yield to the Russians when hard pressed and enveloping them in the wilderness of Finnish forests and lakes by partisan bands.

Japan Joins in Honor Paid to Col. Burnett

Japan joined the United States yesterday in paying honor to Col. Charles Burnett, former military attache in Tokyo and former chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs, at his funeral in Arlington Cemetery. The flag of Japan was draped with the Stars and Stripes over the casket in services at Fort Myer Chapel.

Col. Burnett, who served in Tokyo in 1919-1924 and 1925-1929, was decorated with Japanese Order of the Rising Sun. He died Monday at the age of 62.

Men Dropped From Planes Take Finn Port

Fliers Gun Refugees Fleeing to Norway; 12 Canadians Escape

By the Associated Press

Kirkenes, Norway, Dec. 1.—Russian troops, parachuting from planes, were reported today to have captured Petsamo, Finland's chief Arctic Ocean port.

Advices from across the Norwegian-Finnish frontier said the invading forces utilized the brief light of Arctic day to take advantage of the technique they had developed for aerial transportation of sizeable fighting units.

Parachuting of troops was designed to overcome the great distances encountered in Red army operations. Whole companies in full equipment, with machine guns, have been dropped in Russian maneuvers.

600 Refugees Safe

For the second successive day fleets of Soviet warplanes roamed the narrow Finnish corridor to the Arctic Ocean bombing towns and machine-gunning refugees attempting to flee into Norway over the frozen Pasvik (Pacific) River.

Petsamo and the whole town of Litnahamari were in flames from the repeated air raids, Salmijervi, just across the border from Kirkenes, also was bombed by Soviet planes attempting to turn back refugees seeking safety in Norway.

Some of 600 refugees reaching Norway said the Russians had taken the ancient monastery of Petchenga, 10 miles south of Petsamo, cutting off Finnish troops.

Fierce fighting between the Finns and Russian parachute troops was reported in the Petsamo area.

Despite fire from low flying planes, Finnish refugees continued to flee over the frontier. Roads leading to Norway were crowded with women and children.

A large nickel works at Petsamo was struck by bombs and destroyed by fire.

(The International Nickel Co., at Toronto, Canada, announced it had a plant at Petsamo. At least 12 Canadians were believed to be attached to the Petsamo plant, but were reported to have fled into Norway.)

Church of the Week

Dr. Forcey, Nonsectarian Tabernacle Founder, To Celebrate 1,000th Broadcast Here

Dr. Clark J. Forcey, minister of the Non-Sectarian Tabernacle, will celebrate his 1,000th local broadcast on Thursday. Shown with him are his wife, Mrs. Forcey (left), soloist, and Mrs. Lena Warner, accompanist

By Robert Tate Allan

Dr. Clark J. Forcey, whose radio programs have brought inspiration to thousands, including many shutins, next week will celebrate his 1,000th local religious broadcast.

Minister and founder of the Non-Sectarian Tabernacle, 6440 Piney Branch road northwest, he will face the WOL "mike" on Thursday at 1 p. m., using a medium he described yesterday as "one of the greatest missionary opportunities the Christian Church has in this age."

"The radio reaches countless numbers who otherwise would never hear the Gospel message," said Dr. Forcey, expressing the opinion that many churches are fearful of undertaking radio broadcasts because of the expense.

All of Dr. Forcey's radio programs are broadcasted directly from the studio, including his address on Sundays at 9 a. m. Singing of old hymns and devotions also are featured. The programs are relayed over WJEJ, Hagerstown, Md., and WSVA, Harrisonburg, Va.

Wife a Soloist

Mrs. Forcey, whose parents were pioneer Protestant missionaries to the West Indies, where they died in line of duty, is radio soloist. She also leads the choir at the Tabernacle, whose services are drawing worshipers of 25 denominations, including those of Protestant, Catholic and Jewish faiths.

Dr. Forcey, who sacrificed a lucrative denominational post with a guaranteed salary to launch the Tabernacle project in 1933—at the depth of the depression—disclosed yesterday that a new structure will be erected in the near future.

Purchase of a nearby site is now being considered, and the cost of ground and building will be approximately $50,000, according to the clergyman. To follow the architectural simplicity of the Tabernacle, it will be of either stone or brick construction, with ample Bible scool and other facilities.

"We have no budget, no regular salary for the minister, and no benefits, but we state our needs and trust to God to provide for them," he said. On Thursday, he has invited Dr. A. C. Gabelein, of Philadelphia, editor of "Our Hope," to preach at 8 p. m. Dr. Forney preaches tomorrow at 11 a. m. on "Thoroughly Furnished" and at 8 p. m. on "Dislocated Saints."

Council of Eight

Much stress is laid on foreign missions work in the congregation, with a tithing plan in operation, through which 10 per cent of all contributions are applied toward that enterprise.

Incorporated in the District as the Non-Sectarian Christian Tabernacle Association, it has a council of eight members. They are Charles Locke, Walter Ernest, Jesse Sheffield, Banjamin McKay, Alfred Saunders, Marion Landing, Hobart Moyer and Joubert Mastbrook. Mrs. Walter Ernest leads the youth activities, and Evan Hallman, the Bible school.

Services at the Tabernacle include Thursday night prayer meeting, Bible school at 9:45 a. m. on Sunday, worship rites at 11 a. m., and a "popular gospel rally" at 8 p. m.

Coming here in 1933 "without a friend in the city," as he put it, Dr. Forcey found heart-breaking difficulties and discouragements besetting his efforts to launch the Tabernacle project. Even the elements appeared to be conspiring against him.

Storms Fell 2 Tents

The tent he erected in the summer of that year was demolished by a windstorm. Undaunted, he and his group worshiped for several months at the Vermont Avenue Social Hall of the National City Christian Church, and later in the Joppa Lodge Hall on Georgia avenue until erection of another tent. It, too, fell because of a windstorm.

However, by July 4, 1934, another canvas shelter was ready, and by October of that year, through the cooperation of the congregation and interested friends, the present house of worship became a reality. It was dedicated on October 14.

Native of Bigler, Pa., Dr. Forcey yesterday had the pleasure of seeing his most recent book, "Palaces of God," published. He has written several religious works. He estimated yesterday that he has averaged a sermon daily since coming here.

Mr. and Mrs. Forcey married while students at Greenville College, Greenville, Ill., and have five children. They are Lillian, junior at Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky.; Leslie, Clark, jr., Herschell and Eldon. The latter, Central High student, would like to follow in his father's footsteps. The family resides at 532 Quintana place northwest.

Pastors Seek Hundred Million 'Listening to God' This Week-End

Washington clergymen were urged yesterday to support a national movement designed to have 100,000,000 people "listening to God" during this week-end.

A committee of prominent local pastors sent letters to their brother-ministers, stating that "any such number of individuals committed to God and seeking His direction for their lives would restore the world speedily to peace and sanity and order. We invite you to join with us in prayer that these days may, indeed, be a turning point in world affairs."

The committee includes Dr. W. S. Abernethy, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, and president of the Washington Ministerial Association; Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, First Congregational Church; Dr. W. L. Darby, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches; Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, president of the federation and pastor of First Baptist Church; Dr. Albert J. Little Stories about GREAT HYMNS

"A MIGHTY FORTRESS IS OUR GOD"
—Martin Luther
"A Mighty Fortress is our God,
A bulwark never failing,
Our helper He, amid the flood
Of mortal ills prevailing.
For still our ancient foe
Doth seek to work us woe;
His craft and pow'r are great,
And, with cruel hate,
On earth is not our equal."

*This great hymn was written by Martin Luther very likely during the year 1529. The energetic strains of this hymn have often revived and inspired the most dejected hearts. This hymn has a strong choral tune which has proved a fit medium for the expression of such courageous sentiments.

No Help To Justice

Secretary Ickes has good reason to complain over the manner in which Federal Judge James C. Wilson handled the case of Rene Allred and Neal Powers at Houston. If Mr. Ickes' statement to the press is complete and accurate, Judge Wilson has placed himself in the position of obstructing rather than administering justice.

Messrs. Allred and Powers were indicted by a Federal grand jury for alleged violations of the Connally hot-oil act "in connection with the shipment of 969,773 barrels of oil in interstate commerce." Trial of the case began before Judge Wilson on November 20. The Departments of Justice and the Interior had made extensive preparations. More than 100 witnesses were ready to testify for the Government.

Four days after the trial began the judge summoned attorneys for both sides to his chambers. According to Secretary Ickes, the judge "indicated that he desired to avoid the introduction of evidence and circumstances which might reflect upon the Federal judiciary in general and upon a certain named Federal district judge in particular." The defendant, Rene Allred, is a brother of Federal Judge James V. Allred, former Governor of Texas.

Judge Wilson is reported also to have let it be known that he would welcome a resting of the Government's case so that he could dismiss six misdemeanor counts and one felony count against Allred and Powers and accept pleas of nolo contendere on three other specific charges. He indicated, according to Mr. Ickes, that his sentence would be no less severe under this arrangement than it would be in case of convictions on all ten counts.

Despite the refusal of Government attorneys to consent to any such disposal of the case, Judge Wilson's proposal was put into effect. After dismissing the charge of felonious conspiracy and six misdemeanor counts, the court permitted the defendants to change their pleas and fined them $1,000 each on the remaining three misdemeanor counts. Considering the amount of "hot oil" that Allred and Powers were accused of running across State lines, these fines certainly are not conducive to enforcement of the Connally act.

If it is true that trial of grand jury charges in a straightforward and legal way might "reflect upon the Federal judiciary" or upon any individual judge, then justice in Texas must be in a sorry state. The manner in which this case was disposed of seems much more of a reflection upon the Federal judiciary—specifically upon the court over which Judge Wilson presides.

Philip Scheidemann

It would be far too easy to dismiss Philip Scheidemann, German Socialist, as a figure of tragic futility and that alone.

His life was undoubtedly tragic and, in a narrow sense, it was futile. In the course of his 74 years he saw German Social Democracy transformed from a conspiratorial movement proscribed by Bismarck into the largest party in the Reich. Later, following the Kaiser's overthrow, the Socialists became the dominant element in the new democratic republic of which Scheidemann himself was the first chancellor. Yet, long before the end of his life, the Scheidemann type of socialism had given way to the ruthless, uncompromising, gangster socialism of the Nazis.

The failure of the German Social Democrats was in part a reflection of their moderation. They were men steeped in the nineteenth century tradition of tolerance and humanitarianism. They believed in man's inherent goodness and his capacity, through reason alone, to establish and maintain a cooperative commonwealth. This attitude was not reciprocated by those unscrupulous opponents who capitalized the decency of the Socialists and the other democratic elements in the Reich for their own sinister ends.

There was grim irony in the fact that Scheidemann, the last of the great figures of German Socialism of prewar days, died at the very moment when the self-styled "Socialist Fatherland" of Russia was embarking on the rape of Finland.

To his credit be it said that Scheidemann never had any illusions about the Russian system which claimed, like that of his own movement, to stem from the writings and teachings of Karl Marx. In his reasoned opinion, Communism was "Asiatic." And he performed a great service in preventing it from getting a foothold in Germany in the period immediately following the World War.

Although Hitler was later to claim that he and he alone had saved Germany from Bolshevism, the historic fact is that this task had already been performed a decade and a half earlier by Scheidemann, Ebert and their collaborators. Their ultimate reward was proscription, death and, as in the case of Scheidemann, exile.

He fought the crushing peace terms of the Allies. He fought Hitler, who used those terms to come to power. He fought Communism, now the ally of the Nazis. He lost every battle, except that for his personal integrity.

Working For Russia

"Red Army Hurls Back Invading Finnish Troops, Crosses Frontier."

Thus, in a streamer headline, the New York Daily Worker yesterday announced to its readers the opening of the Russian invasion of Finland. The Daily Worker is the "central organ" of the American Communist Party and in every issue proclaims its affiliation with the Communist International.

A close inspection of the columns of this paper, at this time, is very illuminating. It indicates, for instance, how the news is served up in Russia, where none except Communist papers is tolerated. From the columns of the Daily Worker alone one would gather that the peace-loving Soviet Union (180,000,000 population) has been reluctantly forced to fight by the rapacity of imperialistic Finland (3,500,000 population). "In view of the new armed provocations on the part of the Finnish militarists," it reports, Russian troops were ordered to cross the border.

Furthermore, the New York Communist paper—and presumably those in Russia likewise—made no mention whatsoever yesterday of the bombings of Finnish workers by their Russian "comrades." There was merely a line or two saying that "Soviet air forces bombed the Finnish airports at Viborg and Helsinki." But proof that "Wall Street does not believe the lies in its own paid press" was found in the fact that "Finnish bonds fell a mere 10 points" with the invasion.

Editorially, the blame for the Russian invasion of Finland is placed in part on the United States by this American Communist paper. Under the heading "Wall Street Uses Finland For War" a front-page editorial proclaims that "The plight of the Finnish people, their safety and peace and independence gambled with by the reckless desperation of their rulers, can be laid at the doorstep of President Roosevelt. . . ."

These gross distortions of news, and these reckless editorial assertions, are of course fabricated with a specific purpose in mind. The Daily Worker is, to all intents and purposes, an official organ of the Moscow government. It is published to further the revolutionary interests of that government in this country. It is a newspaper only by courtesy, being actually crude propaganda in behalf of communism in general and the Stalin dictatorship in particular.

So long as this is generally realized no harm is done by publication of the Daily Worker. Its suppression would be infinitely more injurious to American standards than continued tolerance of its fantastic, and therefore laughable, gyrations. But nonetheless it must be remembered that the issue of free speech and a free press takes on a very different aspect in cases where it can be shown that individuals, or institutions, are working as the agents of foreign principals.

It would be well for those operating in this capacity to ponder the words spoken yesterday by the executive of a democracy, which, for a long time, was exceedingly tolerant in giving Communist agents a free rein. "French Communists who treat with a foreign power," said Premier Daladier, "constitute a terrible treason. We shall smash this movement with all our force."

Canadian Silver Foxes

The outbreak of war has demoralized world fur markets, and caused domestic producers of fox pelts to fear that huge quantities of furs will be dumped in this market by Canada and other countries shut off from their customary European outlets. Following strong representations, the Department of State has, therefore, announced its intention to negotiate a supplemental trade agreement with Canada, dealing solely with the marketing of silver and black fox furs and skins.

It seems strange that a separate agreement should be necessary to deal with the limited emergency that has arisen. It ought to be possible to effect changes in specific schedules without going through all the formalities incidental to negotiation of a trade agreement. In the present instance, it is evident that a mere revision upward of tariff schedules would not meet the situation satisfactorily. For when goods are unsalable, tariffs have to be prohibitively high to provide adequate protection against dumping.

It will be interesting to follow the progress of negotiations to see whether the trade-agreements program lends itself easily to adjustments made desirable by unforeseen circumstances. If a friendly agreement can be reached with Canada to limit fur imports, it will certainly be the best way of dealing with this abnormal situation.

Victory For The South?

By a 5-to-4 decision, with two commissioners not participating, the ICC has ordered reductions in freight rates on a limited number of commodities shipped from Southern into Northern territory. The adjustments, designed to bring freight charges into line with those applicable to similar articles shipped from Northern centers, are being widely hailed as a first step toward elimination of artificial freight-rate barriers which handicap Southern manufacturers.

After examining the text of the majority opinion and the two dissenting minority views it seems much less certain that this interpretation is correct.

The majority enunciated certain general and unassailable principles concerning the desirability of providing reasonably uniform rate levels from "adjacent producing sections of the country to common markets." They further held that differences in cost of production and wages of competing producers cannot properly be considered in passing upon the reasonableness of freight rates. "It is not our province," they concluded, "so to prescribe rates as to enable shippers of any section to neutralize, through differences in transportation charges, higher production costs or other economic or natural advantages."

On the other hand, it was conceded that the cost to the carriers of performing transportation services is of great importance and that various other factors, such as the revenue needs of the roads, must also be considered in adjusting rates. The evidence in the present case persuaded the majority that certain specified commodities are not moving freely from the South to the North over all-rail routes and "will not move freely at rates higher, distance considered, than those applicable within the North."

In a lengthy dissenting opinion, concurred in by Commissioner Porter, Commissioner Eastman charged that the majority in fact made "freedom of movement" the controlling test of the reasonableness of the rates in question, despite the emphasis placed upon cost of transportation.

It is apparent that Mr. Eastman's opposition to the majority ruling is based chiefly upon a fear of radical changes in rate structures, developed over a period of many years, which would affect commercial and industrial conditions and carrier earnings in unforeseen and possibly undesirable ways. He made it clear that he does not oppose adjustments, but is not prepared to concede that all apparent inconsistencies are discriminatory and indefensible.

Commissioners Miller and Mahaffie, in a separate dissenting opinion, directed their criticism at the "fragmentary and incomplete" nature of the evidence introduced to show that the rates complained of were prejudicial to the South. The cost data in their opinion are inadequate. Because of the lack of full information they feel that the majority decision is arbitrary and will not endure.

In view of the closeness of the decision, and the emphatic character of the dissenting opinions, it would be rash to assume that the present ruling will, of itself, lead to a general leveling of rate differences between the North and the South.

One way for an insomniac to drop off to sleep would be to try to think of some reason for staying awake.

Because a few egoists carry chips on their shoulders, millions must carry guns on theirs.

Of Lives And Times

From the Chicago Daily News

The theory that Frau von Blomberg's is the face that launched a thousand airships has the appeal of romance. But some shrewd observers were predicting the war, even before the Blomberg marriage, because of the deep psychological and political forces that had been set in motion.

Indeed, there are two schools of history, that of Herodotus, to which Sir Nevile Henderson obviously belongs, and that of Thucydides, which is also that of the social scientists. Carlyle, with his "Heroes and Hero Worship," was a child of the one; Karl Marx, with his "Das Kapital," of the other.

One attributes great human events to the genius or the frailties of rulers; the other, to mass movements and economic forces. One argues that the fate of Rome was determined by the length of Cleopatra's nose; the other, that it was inherent in Roman social and economic systems. One holds that the human will is free, even to the point of fantasy; the other confesses fatalism. One sees in Hitler a kind of god—or devil; the other looks upon him as merely a product of Germany's wounded feelings after 1918.

There is a dullness about social and economic determinism. The "great man" theory is certainly more interesting. But which is right? Does the occasion produce the leader? Or does the leader produce the occasion? Perhaps the truth will be found somewhere between, and history is perhaps the result of certain coincidences. Thus, the man, without the proper circumstances, is futile; but in turn, the circumstances, if not seized upon by the right man, remain sterile. It is the conjunction of the two that, for better or for worse, gives us the world as we have known it.

No Deluge

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

At last I read the opposition of one citizen to the location—or dislocation—of the Gravelly Point Airport. From the felling of the first tree until this morning, this is the first opposition I have seen in your columns.

I was not in Washington during the summer. I should have thought your paper would have been deluged with outbursts from indignant members of the park planning commission, Alexandria citizens' organizations, Virginia garden clubs, Mount Vernon Society, Society for Preservation of Virginia Antiquities, D. A. R., conservationists and just plain citizens who thought the Mount Vernon Memorial driveway one of the beauty spots of America. With acres and acres of land around Washington, why did commercialism have to destroy the natural loveliness of the one roadway along the Potomac connecting the Lincoln Memorial, Arlington and Mount Vernon? My congratulations to "Engineer." E. S. S.

Washington, Dec. 1.

Why Not Invited?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Recently a new city morgue was dedicated on the Gallinger Hospital grounds. All white health agencies were invited to take part in the ceremonies. The colored medical society, as usual, was not invited. Why?

In this enlightened era, such snobbery is so out of place and distasteful to the colored physicians that we are determined to break it up. A more militant attitude on the part of the Medico-Chirurgical Society of the District of Columbia is to be expected and our city officials might just as well prepare to face it.

C. HERBERT MARSHALL,
Chairman, Legislative Committee,
Medico-Chirurgical Society,
Washington, Nov. 27.

Communism And Freedom Of Speech

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Your editorial, "Browder on the Campus," is to be commended, since it takes a stand in opposition to those who seek by various pretexts to exploit hysteria against minority groups, which can only lead to the abridgment of civil liberties for all.

In the circumstances, there is even less excuse for the manner in which the same incident is treated in your news columns. The story by the United Press on the front page of the same issue appears to be factually inaccurate when contrasted with the detailed report which appears in the New York Times of the same date. Moreover, it appears to be calculated to promote the very hysteria against which your editorial inveighs.

The headline over your brief news report as well as the story itself would convey the impression that Mr. Browder was the object of derision and hostility on the part of students and townspeople. The detailed story in other papers does not sustain such an impression, although there are references to incidents that quite evidently served as the basis for your story. The difference is so striking as to make for a revealing exhibition of how journalism can be used to mislead.

Your headline states that Mr. Browder was booed. The New York Times headline states that he was "cheered and booed." Moreover, the Times explains that the students, instead of being hostile toward Mr. Browder, "milled around outside, giving Yale cheers for Browder . . ." And that "their demonstration seemed to be directed mainly at the person responsible for choosing such a small auditorium."

In the headline as well as text of your story it is stated that "Yale Crowd Rocks Browder in Auto After Booing Him." The New York Times story refers to the same incident as follows: "When Mr. Browder emerged finally, they (the students) surrounded him as he headed for his automobile and cheered him loudly. When a handful of dissenters threatened to get out of hand . . . the rest of the student crowd quickly quelled the disturbance with shouts of 'cut it out, cut it out.'"

Your report is that the "audience of 600 persons, mostly students, some of whom showered him with pennies and interrupted his speech with guffaws and boos." The New York Times account reports that "When Mr. Browder arose to speak he was roundly applauded." That during parts of the speech the "audience listened . . . in noncommittal attention" and that "someone in the gallery threw a penny to the stage. But all were interested." (One penny hardly makes a shower.)

J. E. L.

Washington, Nov. 29.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I am writing to express my appreciation of your excellent editorial called forth by the Boston speech of Earl Browder.

Fair-minded Americans have believed that Soviet Russia should have full opportunity to experiment in the field of economics, and that their fellow Americans who have looked with sympathy and admiration on the experiment should not be subjected to persecution and abuse. But when American Communists line up with totalitarian theories and leaders, even apologizing for Hitler, then they deserve no sympathy from Americans true to democratic ideals.

At the same time you are right in saying that Browder should be granted freedom of speech. We claim also freedom to say what we think of it.

JOHN C. GRANBERY,
Georgetown, Tex., Nov. 27.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Your defense of Earl Browder in particular, and of the rights of Communists in general to inject their poison into the "intellectual blood stream" of America, amounts to the same principle as to defend dope peddlers, gangsters, racketeers, extortionists and arch criminals.

According to the arguments advanced by many defenders of these known destroyers, if the same tolerance were applied in our courts of justice and parliamentary bodies, nothing would ever be settled, but the arguments would go on and on forever.

It seems to me that in view of the evidence already established beyond a reasonable doubt in all parts of the world, and particularly in Russia today, it is high time that the prosecution rest its case against this modern "scourge of the world" and a decision be rendered by the jury of civilized, God-fearing, liberty-loving peoples of the earth, once and for all time to come.

The greatest liberals of all time, including Plato, Spinoza, Spencer, and even our renowned contemporary, John Dewey, have repeatedly pointed out that democracy has a tendency to destroy itself by an excess of democracy. The most sincere and most vigorous opponents of communism are the true liberals and the true democratic Americans. The professed enemies of communism are often its greatest allies.

Criticizes Mr. Wentworth

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The series of articles on traffic, written by your Mr. Howard Wentworth, illustrate better than anything I have seen in a long time the basic difficulties with the traffic situation.

The reason they are such excellent illustrations is because of the spirit in which they are written. It is the spirit that actuates so many motorists. That spirit is, I am going somewhere and I must get there in the minimum of time, with the minimum of inconvenience, and the minimum consideration for the rights and privileges of others.

Mr. Wentworth's articles seem to be written entirely in this spirit. When he is going north on Sixteenth street, he is utterly impatient of any east and west bound traffic. It must be stopped for a minute or a minute and half so that he can go from Lafayette Square to Scott Circle without stopping. When he is going east or west, he demands similar restrictive measures against north and south traffic.

He wants the lights set so that pedestrians will have to wait a minute or a minute and a half to get across the street in any safety, and he must know that pedestrians won't wait that long.

When he is going out M street, he demands that parking be abolished in order that he may proceed without any delay. The rights and needs of the merchants and residents in this community are ignored.

In spite of the ghastly traffic toll which we have every year, he asks that the speed limit be raised to 30 miles per hour. What difference a few extra deaths if motorists of this type are able to proceed more according to their liking.

I think, all and all, Mr. Wentworth's articles are very illuminating as to what could be done for the motorist if the rights of pedestrians, mass transportation systems, residents and all other classes of District inhabitants were ignored and questions of available funds not considered.

By all means, let us throw out the present system bodily and try something different, and, if that doesn't work in six months, throw that out and try something else. Traffic is the one field of human endeavor in which it is not necessary carefully and painstakingly to build up a working system by the gradual correction of faults and elimination of difficulties.

Why not throw out everything we have attained and try something different, even though it was tried and discarded 15 years ago? Why progress? Let's vibrate!

Looked And Passed

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Who is my neighbor? Answer to this, given 2,000 years ago, in parable form, will ever stand as the perfect example of completely functioning altruism and Christian concept. It is the golden rule, of which we hear so much and practice so little, either as individuals or as a nation. Nationally we have adopted another rule—we call it neutrality.

Our ships must not go into danger zones. We will supply none of the instruments of death—unless those engaged in wholesale slaughter come and get them. The rule is not without the justification of experience and practicality.

But does it not sometimes come to us, in this land of peace and superabundance, whether we are doing our all for the starving millions of other lands—threatened with destruction from the land, the sea and the sky? Are we not the priest and the Levite who conceived full duty done when they "looked" and "passed by on the other side?"

Bill Your Birds

I was getting my hair cut at Baxter's when I first heard about the cock fights. Baxter's was strictly a gent's place. It had a comfortable masculine odor of bay rum, which he used on the Indians, singed hair, and leftover cigar butts. Half a dozen calendars with pictures of ladies that weren't dressed furnished the only feminine touch. The calendars didn't mean much—they showed January all the year.

Seeing cockfighting was illegal, I was surprised to hear mains were held every Wednesday night in the Poultry Building out at the County Fair Grounds. The boys kept their birds in the coops and bribed the watchman by letting him charge admission to the building. He charged me 50 cents. I learned later his tariff was subject to rapid and constant change. The old-timers just gave him a scowl and walked by, while the more prosperous, or more timid, sometimes paid a dollar or even a dollar and a half admission. I guess I got off light.

Inside, the building was like a huge, airless cavern. It smelled of musty hay, lime, dust and uncleaned chicken coops. Four bulbs, dangling from the rafters, gave an inadequate, yellow light. Tier on tier of display coops with their wire fronts and rusty tin cups, lined the walls. A lot were occupied by sleeping chickens, being fattened there by the local produce houses.

The pit was about 15 feet across, its walls being made of sawhorses draped with gunny sacks. Three lines, about 2 feet apart, ran across the floor of the enclosure. Forty or fifty persons gathered around the pit. Most were men, dressed in leather jackets, sweaters, and heavy work clothes. These were cock owners and trainers. All seemed to be talking at once; each loud and profanely enthusiastic over a bird he was training, or had lost by an unlucky stroke in a previous fight. They didn't brag about the birds they were going to fight that night, from fear of running down the odds.

The rest of the group was a medley of flashily dressed gamblers, sports, high school boys with their dates, and businessmen who strangely enough, seemed thoroughly familiar with the pastime. Beside the tittering school girls, there were three or four older ladies present who proved to be old hands at the sport.

A hat was passed to make up a pot of $15 for the next match. Nearly everyone contributed. This, however, was only true at first. Toward the end of the evening, only the gamblers contributed, which they did readily enough, apparently considering it a business expense.

The cock owners came to the pit carrying their birds. The men walked with a quick, nervous movement as if they, themselves, were preparing to fight. Everyone crowded about the scales at the weighing in, taking that opportunity to look at the birds. One cock was 2 ounces heavier than the other and immediately became the favorite.

I noticed the gamblers set the odds in terms of 6 or 7 to 5—never in terms of 1½ to 1. It was beneath their dignity to give odds in a fraction of a dollar. If a fellow wished to bet that little, he had to bet even.

The long tail feathers of the birds had been cut, or plucked, and the feathers on the wings had been pruned to a short, bristling length. This made the wings as formidable as porcupine tails.

Each owner tied gaffs like long curved darning needles to the legs of his bird. Then he carefully examined the gaffs on his adversary's fowl. The two men entered the ring and stood back to back, holding their birds. The master stood beside them.

"Bill your birds," he called.

The owners turned, stooped, and placed their birds on the ground, shoving their bills together right at the center line. The cocks stared at each other. Slowly the men drew them back to the outside lines, each taking care that his bird didn't move his eyes from the other cock.

At the master's signal, the birds were released. Each volplaned up in an attempt to come down on the other. They met in mid-air, raked, pecked wickedly, and fell to the ground in an explosion of dust and feathers. They separated, circled, flashed together, fighting and slashing in a flurry of beaks, clipped wings, and armored feet.

Time was called and the birds were separated.

The owners stroked and soothed their birds, blew on their bills, and one gave his a bit of water, or perhaps corn liquor. The cocks were set off again—a whirr—a savage flash—and one of the birds was killed instantly, skewered by the other's gaff.

Fight followed fight, and the betting became more and more reckless. The audience seemed to absorb some of the daring of the game cocks. There was a loud babble during the fights, and needless pleas of "Come on there; come on there." The birds needed no coaxing. They were bred to fight and, judging from the exultant appearance of the victors, proud of their fate.

The only protests came from the coops around the walls. Occasionally, a pot-destined biddy opened her eyes, clucked querulously at the clamor, then tucked her head back under her wing and returned to sleep. STANLEY DISNEY.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

A. F. L. Shirks Job

THE PROBLEMS of an honest, legitimate leader of organized labor bespeak the most tolerant consideration, but there are some issues on which a man so placed must take a stand or accuse himself of incompetence or civic immorality. There are union problems which cease to be private affairs of private organizations and become matters of public interest.

William Green was confronted last summer with an attempt of the so-called stagehands' union, officially known as the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Operators, to kidnap the actors' unions. Green stalled when honest leadership called for a thorough investigation and a decision. So the fight went to a showdown, in which the actors won.

Actors Had Resorted To Refined Blackmail

THEY WON, but only by a show of force and threats to publicize the methods of the stagehands' union and the vicious character of its powerful Hollywood boss, Willie Bioff, the Chicago vice-monger. They did not have positive proof of Bioff's conviction, nor is it likely that they even suspected that he still owed all but eight days of a sentence of six months for pandering. But they had heard that he had been so accused, and Bioff himself knew that the facts were such that a careful investigation would expose him. Therefore, at the last minute, when it was certain that the actors would strike rather than submit to anschluss under the rule of a racketeer, Bioff used his influence to call off the raid. And the movie actors, who had been circulating rumors about him, having won their selfish ends, now thanked him for his statesmanship. They had resorted to refined blackmail.

This fight began in a small dispute in that section of the big, all-embracing union of actors known as the night club group. There was disagreement over the propriety of certain expenditures. It was strictly a family row which could have been settled absolutely by simple arithmetic and reference to the laws of the union. Instead it developed into a wild political and emotional brawl in the course of which the actors' parent group suspended the night club section. The stagehands then promptly attempted to absorb the suspended body by granting it a charter. This raid violated the rules of the American Federation of Labor, but still Green took no action. The leaders of the stagehands were attempting to grab off whole unions of workers without the slightest pretense that the dues-paying rank and file had expressed a desire to be taken over. On the contrary, they voted against anschluss.

Amusement Industry Is Major Business

THE STAGEHANDS—meaning the union officials, not the rank and file of that great, mixed group of crafts—nevertheless went far back into the archives to discover that a phrase of their original charter, a provision long forgotten and never used, gave them jurisdiction over all employes of the theater. They said that included the actors, and now they were going to force all the performers into their union and fatten their treasury with dues and income taxes by a threat to call off projectors and backstage employes wherever an actor appeared and refused to submit to absorption.

There may be a popular impression that the amusement industry is unimportant by comparison with steel, garments or motors. On the contrary, however, this is a major industry, involving vast numbers of workers and vast amounts of wages and capital. The opportunities for racketeering, including extortion and stink-bomb coercion, are many and rich and have not been neglected. The very fact that such a creature as Bioff could become a labor power in the amusement industry throughout the United States proves that the higher executives of the American Federation of Labor neglected their responsibility not only to the public but to the workers in the trade.

A. F. L. Executives Evaded Responsibility

THE PROCESS by which he drifted from pandering in a brothel to authority over a big industry with power to impose taxes, assessments and enormous license fees on workmen who were afraid to protest proves that the A. F. of L. executives had neglected the rights of their own people and the higher interests of the federation itself in their fights for office and jurisdiction.

Even Frank Gillmore, the president of the four A's, the parent group of all the actors' unions, has refused to say a word for publication against Bioff after it has been shown that he was guilty of an offense which is not condoned even in prison society. That would be unseemly as between one union official and another.

The moral questions which challenged the leadership of the A. F. of L., the actions and facts which have injured its reputation, have been ignored for the sake of expediency. In the long run, however, this conduct in responsible office will prove not to have been expedient.

Grounded U.S. Destroyer Is Floated in Cuba

The United States destroyer Reuben James which went aground Wednesday on the coast of Cuba was floated at high tide yesterday, the Navy Department announced. The vessel was floated with the aid of other naval craft after some weight had been removed. The destroyer is expected to proceed to the Charleston (S. C.) Navy Yard for repairs under its own power.

'Innocent Front'

By Benjamin Stolberg

Catspaws Of Communism

This is the fourth article on "The Collapse of American Communism," by Benjamin Stolberg. The fifth, will be published Sunday.

ON AUGUST 14, 1939, two weeks before the Russo-German alliance and the invasion of Poland, the Communist Daily Worker announced that "more than 400 leaders of American thought, renowned scientists, authors and teachers had signed an "Open Letter to All Supporters of Democracy and Peace," in which they protested against calling the Soviet Union a totalitarian state.

This "Open Letter" was provoked by the formation of the Committee for Cultural Freedom, which had been formed for the sole purpose of opposing all forms of totalitarian interference in cultural life of America. The honorary chairman of the C. C. F. is Dr. John Dewey, its acting chairman is Prof. Sidney Hook. Among its members are such representatives of various cultural groups as Sinclair Lewis, Louis Adamic, Thomas Mann, John Dos Passos, authors; Oswald Garrison Villard, Elmer Davis, Henry Hazlitt, journalists; John Sloan and Walter Pach, painters; Morris L. Ernst and Louis Waldman, lawyers; Prof. Bridgeman, the Harvard physicist; Prof. Cannon, the Harvard physiologist; Prof. George Counts, of Columbia, and Prof. Arthur Lovejoy, of Johns Hopkins.

The "Open Letter" declared that the Committee for Cultural Freedom was attempting to aid Fascism by including Stalinism with other totalitarian influences. It stated that "the Soviet Union continues to be a bulwark against war and aggression;" that it "has effected one of the most far-reaching cultural and educational advances in all history;" and even that "it has shown a steadily expanding democracy in every sphere."

This letter was written by Dr. Corliss Lamont, head of the Friends of the Soviet Union and leading trouble-shooter for the Stalin regime in this country. It was sent out from the address of the Council on American-Soviet Relations, a fly-by-night innocent front, and on its "initiating committee" were such notorious fellow travelers as Dashiell Hammett, Vincent Sheean, Mary Van Kleeck and Donald Ogden Stewart. But among its signers were a multitude of genuine innocents, some of them really important in our cultural life.

Some Now Admit They Were Duped

AFTER the Stalin-Hitler non-aggression pact, some of the more distinguished signers of this document were asked whether they still believed what they had signed. Everyone of them repudiated the letter and declared that he had been taken in.

I cite this "Open Letter" because it illustrates the extent to which some leaders in American thought continued uncritically to consider the Stalin regime as representative of a great democratic social revolution until the very day of its open alliance with Nazism.

It was this naive attitude of many professional people which made it possible for the Stalinists to permeate American cultural life under cover of a "liberal front against Fascism." To be sure, the outstanding liberal leaders of American thought, with three or four exceptions, never fell for the lie that Stalin is the Russian Jefferson. Such men as John Dewey, Charles A. Beard, Sinclair Lewis, turned against the Stalin regime when its increasingly Fascist nature became evident.

Indeed, those few distinguished intellectuals, like Theodore Dreiser or Van Wyck Brooks, who lent themselves to the Stalinist racket, did so because they were politically unsophisticated. The vast majority of Stalinized "intellectuals" were either plain racketeers, careerists, unpromising youngsters hoping to make some sort of reputation, or plain synthetic "writers" and "artists" made by the innumerable Stalinist or Stalinoid sheets. As the "innocent front" racket became more fashionable among the New York highbrows and peripheral "revolutionary" slummers of Park avenue, the Communists and their fellow travelers were able to worm their way into strategic positions in publishing houses and editorial offices.

THEY PERMEATED the art world, the theater, and they completely controlled Hollywood, where they collected hundreds of thousands of dollars from stars, directors, and high-priced screen writers. Of course they worked from two ends. One might be called the cocktail-party end. At the other end they captured the American Federation of Teachers (A. F. of L.), the American Newspaper Guild (C. I. O.), the Screen Writers' Guild (C. I. O.), the Book and Magazine Guild (C. I. O.), and to some extent the unions of stage and screen actors. Thus they were able to exercise both social and professional pressure for Stalinist ends.

It is no exaggeration to say that from 1936 until the Russo-German pact, the known anti-Stalinists among the younger and less well established writers, actors, artists were systematically sabotaged by Stalinists in strategic positions in their respective fields. And even established anti-Stalinist writers, actors, artists had their troubles. My own book, "The Story of the C. I. O.," was delayed five months while the Communist Party was moving heaven and earth to prevent its publication. The editor of the Viking Press, which published it, David Zablodowsky, is a member of the Communist Party. Dozens of similar cases might be named.

Some of the typical "innocent fronts" among the professional groups were the League of American Writers, the American Artists Congress, the Theater Arts Committee, which functioned in the theatrical, radio and entertainment world generally; the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League, and the Lawyers' Guild. Probably the most interesting "innocent front" was the American Committee for Intellectual Freedom and Democracy, which under the chairmanship of Professor Franz Boas, of Columbia, enlisted over a thousand American scientists and educators, among them several Nobel Prize winners. Behind Dr. Boas, who disclaims being a Stalinist, the real organization work of this important committee is done by Rabbi Bernard Stern, a Columbia instructor, and M. I. Finkelstein, a notorious Stalinist in the history department of the College of the City of New York.

From the first the Communist Party captured control of the W. P. A. arts projects. Their control of the Federal Theater Project became such an open scandal that the project simply had to be killed by Congress. In the Federal Arts Project, whose heads are definitely not Stalinist, the party exerts enough pressure through supervisors to get the lion's share of the jobs. But the Writers' Project, which Harry Alsberg, its national head until recently, practically turned over to the Stalinists in the beginning, was simply packed by Communist Party members and stooges who had never or hardly ever written a line and continued in that tradition on the project. With Alsberg's consent they arranged to have a rejection slip from an editor serve as a credential for getting on the project. And the Communist Party regularly used the project in New York City to provide support for its members while they worked in party offices and attended schools for party functionaries.

Red Domination Of FWP Alleged

EVEN BEFORE the pact, the Administration cracked down on the Stalinists and their friends. Henry Alsberg was unceremoniously dismissed. Since the pact neither the Administration nor the workers on this project need to worry about the comrades.

Like the Writers' Project, the League of American Writers—a vociferous and disciplined Communist front, whose head is Donald Ogden Stewart, a humorist, employed in Hollywood—includes a mere handful of actual writers; the rest are synthetic writers, who have never written anything except an occasional "proletarian" poem or short story or an abusive essay on their betters in The New Masses, Fight or any of the 101 fly-by-night sheets put out by the Stalinist machine. Yet they have been able to create a veritable reign of terror in the publishing field against really radical or liberal authors who do not follow the party line.

In the so-called intellectual fronts, as in the other Communist fronts in this country, the reaction to the acid test of the pact was the same. The leaders have followed the policy of silence or cautious apology for the Kremlin "line" on the war, while the rank and file is busily scrambling off the bandwagon. The executive of the League of American Writers, for instance, has failed to answer a letter signed by Dr. John Dewey and other progressives urging it to state its position.

The Theater Arts committee, on the other hand, in its official organ, Tac, turned overnight from "collective security against fascism" to the new Russian policy of isolation for the United States. And it is significant that this magazine, which in the past was largely made up of contributions by leading stage luminaries and playwrights, in the October issue has not one contributor who is even moderately well known.

But it was in the behavior of the Stalinoid liberal weeklies, The Nation and The New Republic, and in that of individual fellow travelers that the consternation created by the Stalinazi alliance showed most clearly.

SINCE THE first Moscow trial The Nation and The New Republic have worked hard to maintain an appearance of "liberalism" while at the same time standing in with the Red Fascism. The editors of these journals were genuinely confused; both editorial staffs have become cliques of fellow travelers; and among their executive editors there was not one really strong or distinguished personality. It follows naturally that their circulation became ever more limited to more or less fellow traveling liberals. But the Hitler-Stalin alliance knocked them groggy, and they have been punch-drunk ever since.

To be sure, Miss Freda Kirchwey, owner and editor of The Nation, came out against the alliance clearly and definitely. On domestic issues, on the other hand, The Nation confusedly groped along after the party line. It religiously refers to the Dies committee as a Fascist attack on civil rights, which is nonsense. And it keeps on defending the various innocent fronts as genuinely liberal organizations.

The New Republic reads editorially very much like The New Masses on every issue except the Stalin-Hitler alliance. It seems to be against the alliance but for Stalin's motives in making it. The fact is that neither of these liberal journals has much, if any, influence left. They constitute in America what the French wittily call la presse confidentielle.

Defections From The Front Begin

THE FIRST CASUALTY among the individual fellow travelers was Heywood Broun, who fell off the Stalin bandwagon immediately after the trade pact was announced, and has stayed off. Kyle Crichton, of Colliers, who, as Robert Forsythe, has for years been maligning John Dewey and other American liberals, including myself, in The New Masses, tearfully confessed to those patient enough to listen that he is "sorry." I have seen dozens of letters from less inveterate trouble-shooters for the Communist Party which indicate a panic-stricken retreat from Moscow.

From Hollywood comes the news that Melvyn Douglas, known to film fans as one of the most sophisticated lovers on the screen, and to the comrades as one of the most naive and generous of fellow travelers, has come out bitterly against the Stalinazi pact. Douglas has always been a sincere anti-Fascist.

To be sure, some intellectuals stuck, notably Prof. Frederick L. Schuman, of Williams College, and Upton Sinclair, the superannuated muckracker, who continues to sing all praises of "Soviet Socialism" in The New Masses. Poor old Upton! He lost his rake long ago.

The resignation from the Communist Party of Granville Hicks is important—not because of Mr. Hicks but because his is the outstanding example of the synthetic Communist-made reputation. Mr. Hicks was made by the party into "the leading Marxist literary critic." He is neither Marxist nor a critic. And his one book on American literature—in which every writer was judged in terms of the "class struggle"—is the laughing-stock of American scholars. When Mr. Hicks resigned from the Communist Party, thus retiring into well-merited obscurity, he made it clear that it was not the pro-Hitler policy of the party that he objected to, but its bad publicity campaign.

There are hundreds of little Hickses who are running from the party without giving statements to the press, because they can't get them in.

Much bigger than Comrade Hicks is Vincent Sheean, well-known journalist and author, who is typical of what is happening to the fellow traveling opportunists. Mr. Sheean has knowingly fronted for the Stalinists before and since the Stalinazi alliance. He was on the initiating committee of the "Open Letter" quoted above, which told the world what an enlightened and democratic country the Soviet Union under Stalin is. On September 4 he defended the Hitler-Stalin pact over a national hook-up, stressing the anti-Fascist nature of the Soviet regime. On September 19 this broadcast reappeared as an article in the New Masses. The Daily Worker gathered Mr. Sheean to its bosom.

Vincent Sheean Forsakes Stalin

In the New Republic of November 8 and 15, Mr. Sheean suddenly discovered that Russia is a Fascist state and discussed in learned detail its degeneration from revolution through "Thermidor" (counter-revolution) to "Brumaire" (Bonaparte's assumption of power.). In less than three weeks he had discovered that "ignoring every precept of revolutionary thought from Robespierre through Marx, Engels, Lenin, Trotsky, and even his earlier self, Stalin has, as a personal dictator of an enslaved and terrorized state, embarked upon a militarist expansion the end of which can not be seen by any person now living."

Mr. Sheean has learned quickly.

Rain, War May Keep Roosevelt Here

The prospect of rain or snow in Philadelphia, coupled with the grave international situation, may cause President Roosevelt to abandon his plans to witness the Army-Navy football classic today.

Final decision on whether the President will attend the game was deferred until today. Should he drop his plans for going to Philadelphia, Mr. Roosevelt said he would also cancel his projected week-end trip to Hyde Park and would remain here to maintain a close watch on European developments.

Tragedy Of Finland

By Mark Sullivan

Eyes Opened, U. S. Stands By

RUSSIA'S INVASION of Finland had got under way Thursday. Friday morning came the President's regular press conference. He told the newspapermen he had two items of news to give out. First he said he had signed an executive order providing that Government employes should have holidays on Saturday, December 23, and Saturday, December 30, the Saturdays preceding the two Monday holidays.

The other information he wished to give out, he said, was a statement about Russia-Finland. It had been put in mimeograph form, a copy would be given each of us at the close of the conference. Meantime, Mr. Roosevelt read it to us. It was sufficiently elevated and serious and at the same time not sensational, an adequate and proper document for the occasion. He read it in almost a monotone.

If, some months ago, when the war between Germany and Britain was developing, there had been some feeling that Mr. Roosevelt's attitude had been restive; if at that time some felt that Mr. Roosevelt seemed disposed to be over-aggressive, there was no justification for any such feeling now. Throughout all Mr. Roosevelt's allusions to the Russia-Finland crisis, Mr. Roosevelt was totally unexcited, poised, almost casual.

President Remains Matter-Of-Fact

PRESENTLY, the newspapermen asked questions, about steps our Government might take—whether we might break off diplomatic relations with Russia, what was the status of messages our Government has sent during the past few weeks to Russia and Finland—had there been replies from both countries? To these questions, Mr. Roosevelt was again restrained and matter-of-fact. He said our information was still fragmentary. All that the Government had received up to this time had come through the same channels as the newspaper dispatches, roundabout telephone messages, through connections made with difficulty in neutral countries.

That was all. The conference drifted off into other topics. There were one or two smiling questions, intricately framed to lead Mr. Roosevelt to say something from which inference could be made about a third term. These brought the usual laugh from the newspapermen, and from Mr. Roosevelt the usual humorous evasion of the trap. It was perhaps faintly noticeable that this making a jest of the third-term idea has lost some of its freshness, some of its capacity to excite hilarity, both to the newspapermen and to Mr. Roosevelt.

New Tragedy Taken Without Emotion

THERE WAS nothing more about Finland-Russia. Yet here, springing at our eyes from newspaper headlines, assailing our ears over the radio, was one of the tragic events of history. We were taking it without apparent emotion. As the newspapermen, in couples and threes, strolled back to their offices, their talk was about American politics: who will get the Republican nomination, who the Democratic; which party is likely to win; how dependable are these polls that point toward diverse outcomes.

If the attitude of Mr. Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull toward Finland-Russia is outwardly calm and surefootedly correct, it may be because neither they nor the country know anything important or effective that America can do. We can take for granted that Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Hull feel as strongly as many of our people the somberness of what is happening in Finland. But if there is a course of action practicable for us to take, it has not yet suggested itself, either to our Government or to many of our people. We might break off relations with Russia, recall our Ambassador or some such gesture. But would that help Finland? Any more than the recalling of our Ambassador from Germany helped Czecho-Slovakia or Poland?

No Excuse Is Left For Gullible Innocents

INDEED, it is not the subjugation of individual small nations that concerns us most. That is tragedy; it excites our pity and indignation. But it is no threat to us. What deeply concerns us, comes home to the very heart of our national life is the onward, westward, spread of authoritarian government—a conception which denies to small nations the right to live, denies representative government, denies the right to individual opinion, the right to religion, denies justice, denies every right of any individual or minority.

There is one thing we can do, must do. What Russia is doing to Finland by arms, the extension of her form of government and society, she is attempting in America by intrigue, carried on by her agents. It is inconceivable that America should lack the resolution to shake this off. Those who carry it on include some who are direct agents of Russia; some who, without being agents, have concretely in mind the changing of our form of government and society; and some whose status is that of gullible innocents. For what the gullible innocents have done so far, they may be forgiven. From now on, they are without excuse.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Shortening The Presidential Campaign

IN VIEW OF the fact that Senator Vandenberg spoke out before the President, it ought to be possible to take a non-partisan view of the suggestion that the national convention be held somewhat later than usual, and the campaign shortened by perhaps a month or six weeks. And since Mr. John Hamilton says that the Republican National Committee has already been considering the idea which Mr. Roosevelt has now adopted, there must be something in it that appeals to the party managers on both sides.

Each party is bound to ask whether it stands to gain or lose by shortening the campaign.

There are certain obvious advantages for the Democrats. In all probability they are still the majority party and their main problem, therefore, is to heal their differences and to unite. Now by bringing the Presidential nominations nearer to the local nominations, and by bringing both nearer to election day, the influence of the politicians would tend to displace the influence of theorists and ideologues and ambitious personages. A party always becomes more practical as it comes nearer to the actual voting. The desire to win becomes more insistent than the passion for ideas. And since it is ideas and temperaments that divide the Democrats, their chances of winning will be better if their convention is run by the practical politicians.

Target Withheld From Republicans

THEY ALSO stand to gain by refraining as long as they can from presenting the Republicans with a target at which to shoot. For until the Republicans know whether they have to attack a conservative Democrat like Mr. Garner or Mr. Hull, or an out-and-out New Dealer, or some sort of hybrid like Mr. McNutt, they will not really know how to mount their campaign. The Democrats, on the other hand, must naturally conduct a defensive campaign, and the longer they delay the more they can cut and trim their internal differences until they find their strongest position.

But delay would also offer advantages to the Republicans. Their chance to win depends upon capitalizing a general discontent with the party in power. Therefore, as soon as they have to take affirmative decisions by nominating candidates and writing a platform, they will be in some important degree on the defensive.

It will not be an easy thing for the Republican convention to take a line which causes enthusiasm among the friends of Mr. Hoover and Mr. Nye, Mr. Vandenberg and Mr. Dewey, Mr. Borah and Mr. Wadsworth, in big business and in the farm bloc, among the Eastern hard-money men and retrenchers as well as the Westerners who like softer money and subsidies. For the fact of the matter is that the Republican Party is more deeply divided than is the Democratic Party; the thing which unites it, namely, a varied and often contradictory discontent, is less dependable than the thing which unites the Democrats, namely, offices and the desire to continue in office. So one can understand why Republican managers are attracted by the idea of postponing the time when they must move from the negative to the positive, and say who is their leader and what he stands for.

Tactical Advantage Lies With Incumbent

THERE IS STILL another advantage in delay. The party in power, unless it is utterly demoralized and beaten before the campaign, like the Democrats in 1920 or the Republicans in 1932, is able to reply to the oratory and propaganda of the opposition by executive acts. This is an immense tactical advantage, and it is one of the reasons why, if conditions are fairly favorable, the party in power tends to stay in power. Along with the prestige of office it has also the capacity to act, while the opposition is merely talking.

Thus, if the Republicans have to take a positive position in June, and if something in their criticism or their proposals seems to be working well in their campaign, a resourceful Administration can take action which disposes of the issue, or confuses it, or creates a diversion. The longer the Republicans can keep the Democrats from seeing just what kind of issue they have to meet, the less will the Administration be able to employ its power to act and to make news and capture public attention.

A man would need to be clairvoyant to see now which party would be the real gainer where the balance of advantage is so even. The fact of the matter is, I think, that both parties have more to gain than to lose by shortening the campaign, and what is to their common advantage is also in the public interest.

Long Campaign To Hurt Nation

A NATIONAL campaign four months long, especially when it has been preceded by five or six months of primary campaigning, is too long. It is too long a period in which to let partisan and factional interests dominate the Government and the public business and the Nation's life. Politics are necessary. Politicians are necessary. Campaigns and conventions are necessary. But too much, even of a good and necessary thing, is too much, and such a prolonged spell of politics is not good and it is not necessary. Particularly, it is not good and it is not necessary in a time like this—when the American people have to make grave decisions, and need every ounce of disinterested and patriotic attention to the realities that can be found in their public men. This unnecessarily prolonged campaigning means that for the better part of a year every word and act of public men is either attuned to the campaign, or, what is just as bad, is believed to be.

The long campaign is, of course, a hang-over from an earlier age, before the great press services, before the radio, the camera, the telephone and telegraph, the airplane, motor car, and fast railway trains had made the face and the voice and the opinions of candidates easily known throughout the country. In those days it was necessary for candidates to travel about slowly, showing themselves to the people, and submitting themselves and their wives to a face-to-face inspection.

But today anyone who is likely to be considered for President has been seen and heard in so many places and by so many people that there is little to be gotten out of the long tours with ten speeches a day from the rear end of a train except laryngitis and indigestion. And even if this sort of campaigning is still advisable, it can be done by fast train and airplane in two months just as well as in four.

Aspirants' Speeches Grow Worse And Worse

A shorter campaign is necessary also because no candidate can think of enough things to say to make more than eight or ten speeches. That, as a matter of fact, is a lot of speeches. In the old days he could make the same speech over and over again because in each new town it sounded like a new speech. But nowadays nearly everybody hears or reads his speech at the same time, and then the poor man and his brain-trust go through agony trying to invent a new speech or rewrites the old one. The result is, generally, that as time goes on, the speeches become worse and worse. And in the last month of the campaign the intellectual level sinks to a point where honest men say that they are able to vote for their candidate only by not listening to what he and his campaigners have gotten down to saying.

Thus, it is an established rule that the election is set about a month before it takes place, and this rule tends to become more and more absolute as the straw votes become more and more accurate. The real campaign is over by the end of September, and after that the only votes that are changed are the bad votes of those who are gullible to whispering campaigns and stunts and scares. So it would be better to shorten the campaigning to the few weeks which are all that is needed for presenting and discussing the issues. This would save everybody the wear and tear of the last period when the ball is over, the flowers are wilted, and the air is stale, and the guests are unsteady on their feet.

Finns Mobilize Men, Money Here

New York, Dec. 1.—Finns of America were mobilizing men, women, money and materials today to help their fatherland and their first contingent of fightmen was scheduled to sail for Finland on the Swedish liner Gripsholm December 9.

The recently formed Finnish Relief Committee announced $1,000,000 as its money-raising goal for the Finnish Red Cross.

Pity The Poor Player

("A baseball player, drawing $10,000 a year, recently applied for a relief check for $15 a week on the ground he is unemployed in the winter."—News item.)

Upon relief rolls I would go,
A check each week I'd clutch;
I only get ten grand a year—
Which isn't very much;
My life is of the hardest sort,
Pathetic is my lot:
I have to play in baseball games
In summer when it's hot.

II.

Ten grand a year is picayune;
It barely compensates
A fellow for reporting at
The ball parks with his mates.
It leaves me in the wintertime
Without a thing to do;
Why should relief boards hesitate,
To see me safely through

III.

In summer when it's warm and nice
The life is not so bad;
I work two hours every day,
At pay that makes me glad;
But, ah, when wintry weather comes,
And bitter breezes sting,
I only have ten thousand yen
To tide me through till spring.

IV.

The nights and days are, oh, so cold,
And great big piles of snow
Prevent a player getting his Supply of easy dough;
I haven't got a drop of coal—
(In fact I'm using oil)—
It's awful how a player gets
So little for his toil.

V.

Hark! Hear the gale come sweeping down!
It means a freeze tonight;
I've only got nine overcoats—
I ask you, is it right?
My food supply is just enough
To last till April warm;
And nothing but my salary
Protects me from the storm.

VI.

Relief! Relief! Oh, hear me call!
For some State-aid I pine;
I only get meat thrice a day
And very little wine;
When baseball parks are deep in ice,
I can't field, slide or bat,
So slip me 15 seeds a week—
I'll let you off with that.

Midshipman Says Naval Academy Students Can't Help Feeling a Little Proud, All Things Considered

BECAUSE TWO MIDSHIPMEN who had twice been "beautifully" entertained in her parents' home as week-end guests, failed to repay their social obligations as she thought they should, a girl wrote this department a few days ago to complain that midshipmen "apparently use people, get all they can and drop them without returning anything." Students and friends of the Naval Academy are not letting her blistering comment go unanswered. Following are some of the letters received. M. H.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: With great delight did I read your column Tuesday morning, because—for a change—you took our side! Thank you! I have always thought that you were slightly prejudiced against midshipmen in general because of their pestering letters in which they so blithely ask counsel in solving their (mostly imaginary) love problems. In fact, I wouldn't blame you a bit for being prejudiced.

However, after reading your reply to "Disgusted's" wailings, I immediately recognized the fact that you understand and fully appreciate the status of a midshipman. I suppose you are expecting a tremendous influx of letters from Annapolis way; and you'll probably get them. Midshipmen hate to be called "conceited spongers." But I'm inclined to think that it's the truth that hurts. After all, why shouldn't we be a bit egotistical?

Look at the many advantages we have over the ordinary college student: We're sure of our three meals a day. We don't have to worry where our next tuition fee is coming from. We don't have to worry about clothes; instead, we wear pretty blue uniforms with gold buttons that make people turn and stare. We are always in the public eye and have often been called, "the spoiled and pampered pets of Uncle Sam." We know we are in one of the most outstanding institutions in the country; one that is the goal and envy of thousands of American boys, and so we can't help feeling a little proud.

As for being ignorant of social obligations, I think the instance described by "Disgusted" was an exception. It was inexcusable, of course, for the midshipmen to fail to express their appreciation of the girl's (and her parents') hospitality in some way—at least, to the extent of sending "bread-and-butter" letters to the latter. But when it comes to asking the girl down to Annapolis for a week-end—well, that depends upon what the girl is like.

You were again correct, however, in saying that midshipmen are placed under too many social obligations to be able to repay them all; and that we are, in addition, greatly limited as to money and leisure. We are always grateful to those people who go out of their way to show us a good time; especially on our cruises, when in strange ports, because we would probably have a rather sorry time if we had to depend upon our own resources.

Because we accept invitations every chance we get, many people are inclined to think of us as "spongers." But why shouldn't we accept them? If people are willing to extend invitations—and they certainly aren't obliged to—there is no earthly reason why we shouldn't accept, just as willingly. Do people always extend invitations with the intention of getting a return invitation—as was so obviously this girl's motive? If she has so little personal appeal that she can't rate a spontaneous invitation to the academy, she ought to stop squawking. You might even tell her that, please! I believe this concludes my little spiel, so au revoir. Sincerely (I mean it!) C. I. S.

Selfish Girls Dropped Like 'Hot Potatoes'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Your statement to "Disgusted" that midshipmen receive a great deal of social attention which they can never hope to repay except through courteous deportment and "thank-you" notes is correct. Her charge that "midshipmen are a conceited bunch of spongers with no sense of social obligation," is unjust.

During the second class summer there are few social functions at the academy. Sailing and biweekly movies are not much to offer the daughter of a hostess who entertained a midshipman. It is possible that the two boys accused of "sponging" had intended to ask the young lady to a hop when the time arrived; providing, of course, that she possesses average beauty and brains.

You are probably familiar with the scarcity of girls in Annapolis. This scarcity causes us to invite girls from nearby cities to our social affairs. Since we have few opportunities to meet Washington girls, I cannot understand the alleged slight that was dealt "Disgusted." If she offers interesting conversation and an attractive appearance her company ought to be sought after, in her own city as well as for our social affairs. But if she supposed that she would be asked to the academy for any other reason than mutual enjoyment of pleasant companionship, she is mistaken. If a midshipman thought she was "using" him to get to a hop, she would be dropped like a "hot potato." Sincerely

YOUNGSTER.

Farmers Turned Snobs At Uncle Sam's Expense?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I certainly agree with "Disgusted" when it comes to giving the low-down on the midshipmen. To them the most important thing about a girl is who her father is, and how important he is socially. As for their failure to repay hospitality, that never bothered me. It seemed unimportant. But what used to burn me up was this: While they were bragging about themselves, and putting me through a quiz about my background, I was wondering if they weren't just plain, ordinary farm boys who had been given a break by Uncle Sam!

"Disgusted" shouldn't lose any sleep over these prize snobs. They aren't worth it. Personally, I'd rather have a boy friend who was willing to work his way through college and make a place for himself in life—without expecting Uncle Sam to educate him and give him a job. N. S. D.

She Prefers Midshipmen To 'Home Town' Boys

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been "dragging" at the Naval Academy for a number of years and naturally have met many types of midshipmen. On the whole, I think, the boys rate 4.0 (superior) in comparison with the "home town" boys, and I also think they are the politest group of boys I have ever met. Naturally you will find the bad with the good, no matter where you go, and the Naval Academy is no exception. I have met a few unappreciative and conceited midshipmen myself, but I just slip out of their lives and entertain no hard feelings . . .

The girl who wants to be a Naval Academy "drag" needs a sense of humor, a cheerful disposition and a winning smile. She can't be a snob, a stick or a prude, and she needn't expect to be put on a pedestal and gazed at with admiration. I think the Naval Academy is a wonderful place, and I feel sorry for any girls who have had the misfortune to get an indelibly bad impression of the boys. NAVY DRAG.

Guest Room Should Be Gay and Colorful; May Be Planned for Double Duty in Home

Lily Pons, operatic star (insert) uses informality and gayety as the keynote for her guest room as shown above. The colorful spread in woodsy tones, which inspired the decorative scheme, is a gay chintz sprinkled with dogwood blossoms. The matching curtains are finished with knife-pleated chintz ruffles. Another charming suggestion for the guest room is pottery and Chinese ornaments as shown on the window recesses. Books in gay bindings, reading lights, cigarette boxes and flowers are also accessories that make the guest feel at ease

Is Good Place to Try Out New Ideas In Decoration; Should Be Suited To Either Man or Woman Guest

By Martha Ellyn.

AN OLD Victorian precept, "Where you rest, there decorate" seems to be an ideal one to remember when giving thought to a guest room. Every household needs a guest room so that hospitality can be easy and gracious. When company comes to stay, whether it is for one night, the week-end or a longer visit, there should be a room they can go to and call their own.

Martha Ellyn

A guest room requires the same treatment and amount of furniture as any other bedroom. Although it may be done in a distinctive way, it should not be decorated in a manner that is at odds with the decoration of the remainder of the house. The color scheme should be restful yet entertaining. A wall paper with an amusing design, books in gay bindings, reading lights, cigarette boxes and trays and flowers are all accessories that make the guest feel at ease.

Try Out New Ideas

Since the supposition is that the guest will not be staying over a long period, new items of decoration, within reason, may be tried out in such a room. The guest room is an excellent place to try out some one else's reaction to a new idea in decoration. Since it will be used for either man or woman, it should not be too feminine, yet at the same time gay and cheerful.

It can be arranged and decorated that the room will not be idle in between guests but used for many spare-time duties as a study or a sewing room. Or if a member of the family is ill and does not want to share a room with others, the guest room is a place for a retreat.

A Pretty Room

A guest room which seemed particularly interesting is one I was fortunate enough to see recently when visiting friends. It seemed that the entire theme of the room must have been developed from a flowered cotton twill bedspread with scallops bound with bias tape to match the ground tone and used with a flounce of eyelet embroidery dyed in the same soft French blue as the ground color of the flowered cotton. The wall paper was in blue and off-white and the rug a pale French blue broadloom. The curtains were blue prints that added a gay note. This room seemed to be fashioned in the manner in which a decorator demonstrates that printed fabrics, skillfully handled, can be used for a whole room scheme, contrasted here and there by plain-toned surfaces.

Glazed chintz, that romantic and charming fabric sprinkled all over with quaint flowers and ribbons, makes a bedroom as fresh as a spring garden—a room that will be restful to dream in and refreshing when one awakes. Chintz can be used not only for the bedspread, dressing tables and arm chairs but with dramatic effect on the two end walls of the room.

Your Figure Madame

Fancy Fatteners Add Little to Menu, but Count Up in Calories

THE INCIDENTAL trimmings that do so much to dress up a meal also do a great deal to pad the figure. Most of these fancy fatteners add so little to the quantity of a menu that it does not seem possible they could be very high in calories. But as a rule they are more fattening than the dishes they accompany.

Sauces particularly spread the calories on thick. If you don't think the combination of butter, flour and milk or cream stirs up trouble with your weight, just scan this comparison of calories in various dishes and sauces.

DISH AND SAUCE	CALORIES
Cauliflower	30
Cheese sauce, ¼ cup	100
Asparagus tips, 6	30
Hollandaise sauce, ¼ cup	200
Carrots, ¾ cup cubed	45
White sauce, ¼ cup, thin	100
Whitefish, 6 ounces	175
Tartar Sauce, 1 tbsp.	100
Meat loaf, 2 thin slices	200
Tomato sauce, 1-3 cup	100
Broccoli	50
Drawn butter sauce, 1 tbsp.	100

Sauce Doubles Calories

You will notice that the calorie count for cauliflower would be tripled by the addition of an average serving of sauce! And that Hollandaise sauce contains almost seven times as many calories as the asparagus tips it goes on!

The story is repeated in the salad course. Salad is a slimming dish until the mayonnaise or French dressing is added. You couldn't possibly eat enough salad without dressing to interfere with your weight loss. But there are 100 calories in a single tablespoon of mayonnaise, 1½ tablespoons of French dressing, 1¼ tablespoons of Roquefort dressing, and 1¼ tablespoons of Russian dressing. Boiled salad dressing is comparatively low—it contains only 30 calories per tablespoon.

More Trimmings, Less Food

You need as large a quantity of food as can be squeezed into a reducing allowance but it is apparent that the more trimmings you have, the less food you can have. Therefore, you'll have to give up the trimmings. You can learn to like meats and vegetables for their own flavor. As for salads . . . here is a tasty Reducer's French Dressing recipe which contains no calories: Mix equal parts of mineral oil and vinegar, season with salt, pepper sugar and paprika. Chopped onions, garlic or mustard also may be included.

BALANCED SLIMMING MENU
Breakfast	Calories
Orange juice, ½ glass	85
Poached egg on toast	150
Coffee, 1 lump sugar, 1 tbsp. cream	55

Melba toast, 2 slices	50
Celery and carrot sticks	10
Apple pie, 3"	200

*Made with skim milk
Dinner
Cube steak, broiled	200
Baked potato, ½	50
Butter, 1 pat, ¼" thick	50
Broccoli or other vegetable without sauce	50

Avocado Hit

For an avocado hit do this—alternate slices of avocados and grapefruit around small halves of peaches stuffed with cottage cheese mixed with chopped chives and parsley. Top with French dressing. Pass "pulled" bread—very fresh white bread broken raggedly into large chunks, then sprinkled with melted butter and a little salt. Toast it until it's a delicate brown and serve in a napkin-lined basket or tray.

Party Spirit Invades New York; Two Notable Birthday Celebrations Held

New York, Dec. 1.

THE INTERVAL between Thanksgiving and Christmas is not only the maddest and merriest shopping period of the year, but it is also notable for the way our citizens are gripped and shaken by the play, or party, spirit.

Alice Hughes

For instance, there have been two notable birthday parties wafted in the past week—one by the dancing actor, Clifton Webb, for himself, and one by "Tony" and Peggy LeBoutillier Williams for Carmen Barnes, who was once a child wonder novelist. Webb's party, naturally, called out a combination of first-night audience and stage stars, the invitations reading from five p. m. to five a. m. One of the hits of the shindig was the Webb parrot, who is called "Goo-Goo." This is a very classy bird, but he's pretty frank, remarking very late in the evening, "Don't you think we should go to bed, dear?"

The Webb guest book got a lot of very fancy names that night. Clifton, by the way, is to play the leading role in the Chicago company of the Kaufman-Hart comedy, "The Man Who Came to Dinner"—the part obviously modeled on and about that old essayist, actor and radio crier, Alexander Woollcott.

The party hurled by the Williamses for the Barnes featured a strictly vegetarian dinner, this being an enthusiasm of both hostess and guest of honor. Of course, some friend may have smuggled a chop in—I wouldn't know.

Brother Williams, whose real name is Bronson and not "Tony," is one of our city's most prominent custom tailors, and brightened the affair by wearing a wine-colored bolero as a dinner jacket. The food was very interesting, beginning with a strictly vegetable soup and winding up with the traditional cake.

This party round will continue to and through New Year's Eve, after which a large passel of New Yorkers will enjoy their midwinter breakdowns. It's an old custom here.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN — Whatever will these people think up next? Right at Broadway and Forty-second street we now have what is called the Fiesta Dancetaria—the first serve-yourself eating house in town which also furnishes a dance band for the customers.

Dismal sight to see the big liners belonging to the belligerent powers still lying at their Hudson piers. One of them, the Ile de France, has been moved to a new berth at Staten Island. The big ships are carefully guarded by local gendarmes, for one of Europe's warring nations wouldn't be a bit sorry to see the big babies blown way up high.

ONE OF OUR town's most prominent women had a big Waldorf dinner given in her honor a few nights ago. She's Mrs. William Kinnicutt Draper, who has been active in Red Cross work for 41 years and is now first vice chairman of the local chapter. There's practically a lifetime of well-doing.

I saw two mighty pretty twins come into port the other day. They are Helen Hoffman and Ruth Hoffman Brooks, just back from months in the Arabian desert. They'll write a book or so, no doubt. The Hoffman girls are identical twins, and so look exactly alike, which is very fetching.

Come Monday we're going to see lovely young Katherine Locke again as Ophelia to Maurice Evans' Hamlet. But only for a week. After that the Locke luminosity is due to start rehearsing in a play called "Christmas Eve."

GERMAINE MONTEIL, a truly fine designer of glamorous clothes, closed her recent press showing with a tableau of pretty mannequins wearing red, white and blue. They said "these are styles the French-American way." Whereupon the emotional Monteil broke into tears as the audience applauded pretty madly.

Program Committee

CHAIRMAN—Now girls, whatever we do, let's make this program short and snappy.

MRS. NOODLE—Yes, everybody's complaining about these long programs women have.

DR. NANNIE B. HOPPER—Men are just as bad!

MRS. FLYTIE—What time will the dinner—I mean the banquet, be over?

MRS. JOYNER—Well, if we start eating promptly at 7:30——

MRS FLAGG—We'll never get started that early. You know how women are——

DR. HOPPER—They're not a bit worse than men!

CHAIRMAN—Well now of course we want to begin with some nice music, and so I've asked a little pianist I know——

MRS. FLYTIE—Don't you think it would be more decorative to have a harpist?

MRS. NOODLE—I think we should have a soprano—in costume. Now I know a very attractive little soprano. In fact I've already spoken to her.

CHAIRMAN—We-ll I suppose we could have more than one musical number——

MRS. JOYNER — I think we ought to have some dancing. A friend of mine has a little girl 6-year-old that's simply marvelous. The child's a genius. They're thinking of taking her to Hollywood.

MRS. FLYTIE—If you want dancing, I know Miss Twist would be glad to bring over some of her pupils. My daughter's in one of her classes.

MRS. NOODLE—I know a little woman who does lovely book reviews. And she'd love to be on our program—for the publicity.

CHAIRMAN—Wait girls! We're getting too many numbers. Besides, the other day I met a very interesting archaeologist—a Dr. Digges—and he told me he'd be delighted to show his lantern slides of the Egyptian excavations.

MRS. NOODLE—Oh say! I know a man who has the most wonderful movies he took on a boat trip down the Mississippi! In fact I spoke to him about our program and he said he'd love to show them.

DR. HOPPER—Madame chairman, I don't think we should let this opportunity pass to have something said about our trousers-for-women movement. I understand there's a definite underground opposition developing among the men. Now I would be willing myself to explain briefly to the banquet guests just what this movement will mean to women.

MRS. FLYTIE—I know a lovely young woman who gives readings. She does a lot of O. Henry's things.

CHAIRMAN—Say, we simply can't get all these things in. Anyway, we decided to keep our program short.

MRS. FLYTIE—Well this reader is a sister of that Mrs. Pelf who's just come into the club and I think it would be a good gesture to have her on the program.

CHAIRMAN—We-ll, I suppose we could get some of these things in by starting the music right after the fruit cups. Then the harpist could play through the soup.

MRS. FLYTIE—I think we'd better have the pianist through the soup. People are usually so noisy.

MRS. NOODLE—It's even worse between courses.

DR. HOPPER—They ought to have rubber dishes.

MRS. FLAGG—WHEN are we going to rise and sing the "Star-Spangled Banner"? We really ought to do that at the very beginning.

MRS. JOYNER—No, the thing to do is to sing it when the waiters are taking out the plates after the main course. Then we could drown out the noise.

MRS. FLYTIE—And we could have the harpist through the salad—

MRS. NOODLE—And the soprano after the salad—

MRS. JOYNER—And the little toe dancer through the ice cream——

CHAIRMAN—Wait a minute! The guests of honor will have to be introduced.

DR. HOPPER—Who are the guests of honor?

CHAIRMAN—The heads of all the other organizations and all our past presidents and there'll be several Senators and Representatives, and then all our chairman of committees——

MRS. JOYNER—Yes, and we'll have to thank the hotel people and everybody——

CHAIRMAN—Well anyway as soon as we're through that we can have the lantern slides——

MRS. FLYTIE—Wait! We ought to have the reader before that!

MRS. NOODLE—And the Mississippi movies—and the book review——

MRS. FLAGG—Say, we've got to stand and sing "America" sometime——

MRS. JOYNER—Wait, wait! Girls! There's something else! We forgot the speaker of the day!

CHAIRMAN—That's right! Now we've got to find a place for the speaker!

Stylist Predicts Trousers Will Be The War Vogue

The European war will help to Americanize women's styles in this country, Miss Ruth Hutton, of Copper Union Art faculty, predicts. Women, she adds, may be wearing trousers for almost every occasion at the close of the war.

Eccentric hats and other frivolities of women's dress will be out, Miss Hutton declares. "A parallel influence to an emphasis on Americanism in women's styles," she explains, "will be utilitarianism or functionalism. In no way can we escape altogether the direct result of the war on world fashions. There will be in America reverberations of the utilitarian mode born of necessity in Europe. Silly hats, sable jackets, prominent displays of jewelry, and all types of frivolity in dress, for instance, virtually will disappear."

The war will not only bring about changes in the type of clothes women will wear, but will result in a wider use in styles of American design, inspiration, and motif, according to Miss Hutton.

"It is obvious," she said, "that the duration of the struggle will be an important factor in influencing the degree to which styles in this country will go American. It would not be surprising, however, to see women wearing trousers when the war is over, not only for sports as is done today, but for almost every occasion."

Molly Stonestreet Bows to Capital Society at Dance in Army Navy Club

Scores of College Students, Home for Week-end, Turn Out for Party; Dartmouth Classmates Of Debutante's Brother Fill Stag Line

EVEN THOUGH Thanksgiving in the District was officially celebrated days ago, there are more youngsters home from school and college this week-end than last, and yesterday scores of them turned out for the tea dance at the Army-Navy Country Club, where Mrs. Esther Whiting Stonestreet presented her daughter, Miss Molly Stonestreet, to Capital society.

Home from Dartmouth College for the party was the debutante's brother, Sam, and the stag line was well filled with a group of his classmates. Dancing took place in the large ballroom, while Mrs. Stonestreet, her daughter, and their cousin, Mrs. H. McCoy Jones, received in the drawing room between two fireplaces banked with African daisies, chrysanthemums, ferns and palms.

Despite an injured ankle, which several nights of dancing have not improved, the pretty debutante welcomed several hundred young and older guests. She chose a gown of the traditional white, made with a bodice of silver lame, short puffed sleeves, and a voluminous tulle skirt. A necklace, bracelet and ring, all heirlooms, of pearls and amethysts, completed her costume, and she carried a tulle muff covered with white orchids in a shower effect, given her by Mr. Jones.

Mrs. Stonestreet was gowned in Regal blue crepe, with a jacket the sleeves of which were embroidered in gold, and a spray of orchids. Mrs. Jones wore a cluster of these same flowers with her violet gown, trimmed in deep red.

Mrs. Cederwald Assists at Party

Holding court in another room was the deb's grandmother, Mrs. Alvord Cederwald, who wore black velvet. Mrs. Cederwald was born and raised in Georgetown, and there were many cave-dwellers present.

Tea was served in the dining room, which was centered with a bouquet of talisman roses and African daisies. Pouring were Mrs. Charles H. Bradley, Mrs. David L. Wing, Mrs. Edmund Ocumpaugh, 3d, of New Haven, Mrs. Kathleen Cunningham, of New York, sister of Mrs. Jones; Mrs. Benjamin S. Kilmaster, Mrs. Thomas C. Montgomery, Mrs. Ralph Skylstead, Mrs. Robert Bostwick Carney and Mrs. Harvey L. Jones.

Assisting the debutante were Miss Virginia Pennington, who is making her bow at the Baltimore Cotillion on Monday; Miss Dorothy Chandler, Miss Yolanda Alfaro, Miss Patricia Prochnik, Miss Billie Byrd West, Miss Bernice Merchant and Miss Evelina van Metre, who was presented to society in Annapolis and who will attend the Baltimore Bachelors' Cotillion. All the girls assisting wore in their hair nosegays of old-fashioned owers, a gift from their young hostess.

After the party Miss Stonestreet took her assistants and their beaux to the Army-Navy Club in town, where Maj. and Mrs. Cederwald were hosts in honor of their granddaughter. Mrs. Stonestreet entertained for her assistants at her Cordova apartment.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

Duck and Pheasant Shooting Spices Hunt Country Days With Variety

RIDING TO HOUNDS is not the only sport in which the hunt country is interested. Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Fontaine and William H. Lipscomb have just returned from a stay at the Brook Club, where they shot ducks. Mrs. Sloane entertained a number of friends yesterday for luncheon at her home, Brookmeade, and afterward they shot pheasant over her estate.

Mrs. John Hanes, wife of the Undersecretary of the Treasury, who stables her horses at Louie Duffey's place near Middleburg, came down to look them over on Thursday. She spent the night with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Duffey and hunted with the Piedmont Hounds when they met at Rose Hill, Mrs. George Slater's home, at noon yesterday. Mr. Duffey gave a cocktail party for Mrs. Hanes on Thursday.

Miss June Hanes, who is a riding instructor at Foxcroft this year, is a very busy person on Saturday mornings, when about 20 of the best riders of the school are allowed to hunt with the Middleburg pack. Miss Hanes' job is to get the girls there on time and keep them in order and back of the field.

COURTLAND H. SMITH gave a bachelors' dinner this week at his home in Middleburg in honor of Dr. Bolling Lee, of New York, who is staying at his Virginia estate, Ravensworth, for the bird-shooting season. Among those at the party were Col. Harry Whitfield, Maj. Turner Wiltshire, Dr. Reginald Vickers and Charles Harrison.

Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Scott Hardin, Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Phipps, Charles V. B. Cushman and Larry Hayes left here yesterday by motor for Chicago, where they will attend the International Livestock Exhibition and the Horse and Mule Association's annual meeting. They are all interested in purebred stock and expect to buy some cattle and horses while there.

MISS CHRYSTEL WAGGONER, of Wichita Falls, Tex., who has been staying with Mrs. S. Preston Luck in Middleburg for the foxhunting, has returned to Texas after enjoying great sport here. A member of the famous Waggoner oil family, Miss Waggoner is very enthusiastic about our hunting and will return later in the season.

THE MISSES Eleanor Keith and Jane Rattray, of Brockton, Mass., are staying with Mrs. Luck and hunting several times a week with the neighboring packs. Miss Keith was in England last season, where she has hunted for the past six years. Among the English packs she has followed are Belvoir, Quorn, Cottsmore, Heythorp, Warwickshire, Fernie and the Duke of Bedford's Hounds. This is her first visit to the Virginia hunt country.

MISS LUCY PROCTOR, of Salubria, Oxon Hill, Md., who has been spending the summer and fall months in Virginia with her cousin, Mrs. Southgate Morison, has returned to her Maryland home. Miss Proctor aroused much admiration in the sporting class last summer when she rode her horse, Tilly, from Maryland to Virginia, a jaunt of over 60 miles, in 12 hours. Miss Proctor suffered a bad fall while hunting on Monday with the Middleburg pack. She was knocked out when her horse went down, but was able to motor to Oxon Hill that afternoon and is now recovered. Others who fell while hunting on Monday were Louie Duffey and Miss Eleanor Keith.

Montgomery Women Ask Child Study

League of Voters Urges That Juvenile Court Committee Be Filled at Once

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Recommendations were made yesterday by the Montgomery County League of Women Voters that the membership of the Juvenile Court committee for the county be filled at once and that the Council of Social Agencies study the intake policy of the various county agencies dealing with children.

These recommendations presented by a special committee named by the Department of Government and Child Welfare of the league were accepted by the organization as a preliminary report at its luncheon meeting at the Manor Club. Mrs. J. C. Livingston is president of the league, and Mrs. G. M. Hostetler, chairman of the committee, which has been conducting a study of the Juvenile Court since last September.

Although the State law provides that each county maintaining such a court shall also have a Juvenile Court advisory committee of five, there have been three vacancies on that of Montgomery County since June 1, and no appointments have been made by Gov. Herbert O'Conor to fill them. The league yesterday sent a telegram to him requesting that he fill them promptly. It has also written Gov. O'Conor on several occasions, recommending persons believed qualified for the appointment, but no action has been taken.

Judge John Gassaway, who was appointed June 1, and Mrs. Madeline Fennell, whom he named to serve as probation officer, are both new to the court, the women pointed out, and need the advice of a committee of persons familiar with juvenile work, as provided for by the statute.

The recommendation for a study of the intake policies results from investigation showing overlapping of effort and occasional gaps in the social service program as a whole. This results in some persons receiving more attention than is necessary and in others sometimes being overlooked entirely.

Miss Constance Roach, organization secretary of the National League of Women Voters, addressed the meeting yesterday, tracing the history of the league since its founding by Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt. Miss Roach emphasized the fact that the unit of its work is the individual member and indicated that education of the individual citizen was the only means of securing improved legislation.

Twelve members of the State board attended the meeting, including the president, Mrs. Harold Williamson, of Baltimore. She discussed plans for strengthening the State organization and asked the assistance of the Montgomery group as one of the counties already organized, in forming leagues in other counties. She urged the women to study issues to come before the legislature at its next session.

Mrs. Livingston announced new study groups which will be formed in January by the Montgomery league. Under the chairmanship of Mrs. V. L. Ellicott, of Bethesda, head of the Department of Government and Foreign Policy, a group on "National Defense" will meet weekly at the home of Miss Louise Davidson on Fairfax road, beginning January 11. Another, on "Know Your County," will be under the leadership of L. D. Felton, of Leland, and sponsored by the Department of Government and Its Operation, headed by Mrs. G. M. Hostetler, of Rockville. This will meet with Mrs. Leland. Two others are to be formed later, on this subject, in Silver Spring and in Rockville.

A study group on "Juvenile Delinquency," led by Mrs. James Cope, of Silver Spring, will be sponsored by the Department of Government and Child Welfare of which Mrs. P. B. Morhouse, of Silver Spring, is chairman. This will meet weekly at the Jessup Blair Community House, starting January 11.

New Tenant Court Rules Win Favor

Citizens Visit Session; Like Judge Cayton's Sympathy for Poor

Neighborhood Council representatives saw the landlord and tenant branch of the Municipal Court in action yesterday and praised the fair treatment of defendants made possible by the new rules.

Members of the delegation discussed social problems with Judge Nathan Cayton in chambers after court was adjourned.

"My father and brother are lawyers, but I have never felt comfortable in a court until this morning," Mrs. L. W. Jefferson told Judge Cayton. Mrs. Jefferson, who represented the Central Neighborhood Council, praised the jurist's unbiased demeanor and his sympathy for the poor.

Urge Afternoon Sessions

Mrs. Warren A. Gardner expressed fear that some defendants might be confused in the court and fail to defend their cases. Judge Cayton said he would have the court clerk call all names twice in the future.

The court visit was arranged by Mrs. Lois Sentman, of the Neighborhood Council Division of the Council of Social Agencies. Mrs. Sentman said several neighborhod councils have approved the simplified rules and indorsed another reform urged by Judge Cayton—the holding of the landlord and tenant trials in the afternoon, when more time can be given to considering cases.

Judge Cayton yesterday presided over the court for the first time since the simplified rules were adopted.

"I think the reform is working very well," he said. "It is a great advance to be able to conduct this court with the simplicity and informality that already has proved so effective in the small claims division. The reduction of the court costs also has greatly helped the defendants, who are mostly poor persons brought here for failure to pay rents. I think what is needed most at this time is to hold court in the afternoon, when there will be more time to unravel these disputes. I don't like to see even a suggestion that they are being rushed through."

Would Be More Fair

Mrs. Sentman pointed out that afternoon sessions would be more fair to many persons who cannot leave their families to attend the 9:30 a. m. sessions now held.

Others in the visiting delegation were the Rev. Edward Gabler, pastor of Christ Church; Bernard Ladd, 515 A street southeast; the Rev. Harry Porter, pastor of Westminster Presbyterian Church, who represented the Southwest Neighborhood Council; Emily Tilton, of the District Recreation Department; William Hunt, representing the U Street Neighborhood Council; Brigadier James Roberts, Salvation Army, and Mrs. James Vance, representing Georgetown Neighborhood Council.

BETHESDA—"What have you got for me?" say Barbara Volkmann, Dorothy Matthews and Mary Ann Moffett as they look into Santa Claus' pack. (Note: Don't read this to the kiddies. Lee Lewis filled the role of Santa at the opening of Bethesda's Christmas Lane)

COLUMBIA HEIGHTS—Children gathered around this section's Santa Claus to receive gifts. Last night marked the opening of the tenth Christmas Lane at Columbia Heights, which claims to have originated the idea in the Capital

Colored Lights, Gay Floats in Preview Of Christmas Cheer

Santa Claus opened his lanes through the Capital last night amid the gleeful shrieks of several thousand Washington and Bethesda children.

Undaunted by a light rain, the youngsters crowded four deep along the curbs to await the lighting of myriads of bulbs strung from Christmas trees along the streets.

7,000 Ignore Drizzle

Bethesda's Wisconsin avenue was decorated like a Yuletide package as 7,000 grownups and children disregarded a steady drizzle to watch a multicolored parade of floats, bands and drill teams open up the town's fourth annual Christmas lane.

The rain held down somewhat the size of the crowd, but failed to dampen the enthusiasm of the spectators. And as for the paraders, many of them hatless, why, they just threw out their chests a little farther, or tooted their horns a little louder.

Major honor of the float exhibit went to Bethesda Fire Department, whose entry captured the Chamber of Commerce Cup as best Montgomery County float. It was made up of 5,000 paper roses, fit setting for "Miss Fire Conscious," pretty Martha Ann Harper, who was attended by two maids of honor and two fire-laddies. The department spent two weeks, both day and night shifts, to complete the rose garden on wheels.

The Campfire Girls took the Bethesda sign service cup for the best juvenile unit; and the pert drill team of Bethel No. 3, Job's Daughters, took marching honors and the Hiser Theater Cup. The Whittlesey Cup for the best visiting unit was awarded to the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. of Baltimore.

Doughnut Wins Prize

For its precision and style the Police Boy's Club Band won the Bethesda Theater Cup as outstanding musical entry. Most original was the exhibit of Clover Crest Doughnut—the rollicking, laugh-raising figure of a walking doughnut, which was given the McKee Auto Service Cup.

Most comical unit in the parade was that of G. W. Imrie's Garage, in which a patient tried to operate on himself. This float was awarded a cash prize. Little Dorothy Yarrington won a bicycle offered by Economy Auto Supply for pedaling the best decorated bicycle.

Judges in the parade were State Senator Robert A. Peter, of Rockville; J. W. Shively, of the American Automobile Association, and Isaac Gans, chairman of the District Alcoholic Control Board.

At the reviewing stand in front of the Bethesda Building, a community sing of Christmas carols was conducted by the Rev. Raymond A. Vogley, pastor of Christ Lutheran Church of Bethesda-Chevy Chase, with W. Kenneth Herold at the organ. The lane will continue through January 2.

The parade and lane were sponsored by the Bethesda Chamber of Commerce. The celebration committee included William K. Brecht, general chairman; H. Sherburne Roome, jr., vice chairman; Lawrence M. Richards, secretary; John R. Reeves, treasurer; S. Walter Bogley, jr., lighting; W. C. Powell, parade chairman; Emil Critchfield, publicity; W. H. Whittlesey, Dr. W. C. Bashore and Marvin W. Simmons.

Hazen Gives Signal

Commissioner Hazen gave the signal that spread a warm yellow light in Columbia Heights, on Fourteenth street from Columbia road to Monroe street northwest. The ceremony marked the tenth anniversary of Washington's original Santa Claus lane, introduced in 1929 by the Columbia Heights Business Men's Association.

As the Commissioner reminisced about the days when "cornfields covered this whole area," the children pushed against the arms of brawny policemen in an effort to see Santa Claus drive down the street.

And they saw not one, but six white-bearded St. Nicks, driving in open cars up and down Fourteenth street and carrying bags of toys.

One of them pushed through the crowd huddled under the marquee at the Tivoli Theater and followed the Commissioner on a 15-minute broadcast over Station WMAL, warning his younger hearers to be "good little folks." As Santa left, 9-year-old George A. Ford, jr., was introduced as the "Little Mayor of Fourteenth street."

Santa Eschews Chimney

Two thousand gifts—balloons, whistles, dolls, toy cars and trains—were tossed to the children by the six Santas. And the youngsters rushed for the cars, eluding the policemen, as they scrambled for the gifts.

It was their night, and they were not to be denied, even if, as a little girl said, "Santa didn't come down the chimney." The few parents who had come out for the celebration stood awkardly on the sidewalks, feeling, as one couple said, "out of place."

In Brookland, a more modest lane stretched from Monroe to Newton streets northeast on Twelfth street. But the spirit was the same.

Nine-year-old Mitzi Davis, bundled up in white fur, greeted Santa as he stepped out of a car in the glistening street. Mitzi, who was chosen "Miss Brookland" for the occasion, was lifted into Santa's arms, and the two pushed through the crowd of swaying children to the master switch that lighted the strings of bulbs.

Later, Mitzi was overheard whispering to her mother, "I don't wanna be called Miss Brookland. My name is Mitzi."

Sing "Jingle Bells"

As the anxious youngsters awaited St. Nick, they sang "Jingle Bells," led by Master of Ceremonies William Tobin.

Santa's arrival was followed by a drill by the Sons of the American Legion Drum and Bugle Corps. Hundreds of children dashed into the street and danced behind the band, skipping and bobbing up and down as though they were following the Pied Piper.

Inspector James Beckett and Lieut. William Holmes, of the Metropolitan Police, closed the switch that lighted the Seventh street lane between K and O streets northwest.

The ceremony, held in he 1300 block of Seventh street, opened a contest for four Christmas prizes to be awarded shoppers in the area. The committee, headed by Charles Gordell, will award living room and bedroom suites of furniture, a washing machine and a radio between Christmas and New Year.

Kennedy Hits 'Confusions' In Seal Plan

Recommendations For Altering Measure Are Given to Cabinet By Commissioners

The Seal plan to reorganize the District government does no such thing, but it does abound "in inconsistencies, contradictions, omissions and confusions," Chairman Kennedy of the reorganization subcommittee of the House District Committee said yesterday

With the District Commissioners' public hearings on the Seal revisions completed and their specific recommendations for revamping the plan handed to their "kitchen cabinet," Representative Kennedy disclosed his views in a 2,500-word statement.

A champion of the Griffenhagen plan, Representative Kennedy yesterday was more severe in his criticisms of the Seal plan than any of the citizen groups which attacked the plan earlier this week.

He Finds Confusion

"The thing is so confused it is hard to know where to stop in pointing out its defects," the subcommittee chairman said.

Meanwhile the commissioners yesterday completed their meetings with the "kitchen cabinet" and prepared to write a new plan based on specific recommendations.

Their own plan for streamlining the municipal government and criticisms of the Kennedy bill, which is based on the Griffenhagen report, are due for submission to the subcommittee by December 15.

The original Seal plan called for the set-up of 11 departments but it listed separately and without any connection with the proposed departments the schools, libraries, recorder of deeds, chief medical examiner (which replaced the coroner), Unemployment Compensation Board and the Public Utilities Commission.

In addition to these, Representative Kennedy said, "there are scores of other existing agencies not mentioned, without provision either for continuing them or for discontinuing them and merging them with the departments specified."

The specified departments in the Seal plan are: finance, law, public works, personnel, health, public welfare, recreation, police, fire, licenses and corporations. Under the Kennedy bill the District functions would be divided under finance, law, public works, personnel, health, public welfare, recreation, public safety (police and fire), education, industrial relations, public utilities, insurance, revenue and libraries.

Comparing the two proposed setups, Representative Kennedy said: "Thus, the actual number of departments under the Seal draft would be far in excess of that under the Kennedy bill, but the Seal draft would leave the whole situation vague and indefinite."

Examples Cited

The Seal plan lists the departments merely "to provide a rough grouping of some of the existing agencies as complete units," Representative Kennedy declared.

"It largely disregards the principle of the Kennedy bill of bringing together like functions, activities and processes that can best be carried on together. For example: "It would combine financial accounting, control and service functions with tax administration, which are functions involving distinctly different operations that call for entirely different specialization. It would omit the provision made by the Kennedy bill for financial control over the money handling transactions. The same department would both handle money and account for it."

Referring to the license department proposed under the Seal plan, Representative Kennedy said this department would "be a conglomeration of independent boards and not a department in the real sense." The director of this department "would have little to do," he said.

In regard to the proposed creation of a District merit system, which under Seal's plan would not cover members of the police, fire, school or library departments or those employes subject to the United States classification act of 1923, Representative Kennedy said this would give the District six different civil service systems.

Suffrage Demanded

Repeating its demands for franchise in the District, the Chillum Heights Citizens Association last night voted to withhold indorsement of any plan for District reorganization that does not contain a provision for suffrage. The resolution was adopted in connection with discussion on the Seal plan for local government reorganization.

The association indorsed District Attorney David A. Pine for a judgeship in District Court. It also urged crosstown bus service from Wisconsin avenue to the northeast section by way of Military road and Concord avenue.

Endeavor Marks Fiftieth Year at Calvary Church

Calvary Baptist Church last night echoed with memories of other days, as the golden jubilee of its Christian Endeavor movement was celebrated.

Mingling in Shallenberger Hall, more than 200 guests heard the Rev. Arthur J. Stanley, vice president of the International Endeavor Society, say, "We are living in an age when the call to youth is totalitarian."

"Hitler, Mussolini and the Emperor of Japan expect their youth to give their entire lives to their movement," declared the speaker, "and Jesus Christ calls the youth of the world to help build a Christian civilization." He stressed that Christianity's appeal was neither political nor economic, but universal.

Mr. Stanley is pastor of a Baptist church at Fairport, N. Y. Willard C. Estridge, toastmaster, introduced him. Miss Julia Collier, president of the Tuesday Evening Christian Endeavor Society, host at the banquet, welcomed the diners.

Dr. Samuel Greene, for many years pastor at Calvary, gave strong support to the Endeavor movement, which had its origin at Portland, Me., in the early '80s, it was recalled.

W. W. Everett, vice president of Woodward & Lothrop's, recalled when 15,000 International Endeavor convention delegates met in tents on the Monument Grounds in 1896.

Christian living today is being challenged by its friends as well as its enemies and it is worthwhile for every Christian to consider the value of his way of life, more than 200 youths were told here last night.

Delegates to the annual Older Boys' Conference of Maryland, Delaware and the District of Columbia, the young men met for the opening dinner session at Reformation Lutheran Church, whose assistant pastor, the Rev. Ralph W. Loew, addressed them.

"We need the development of the respect of others that we may be Christian leaders and win the confidence necessary to speak and lead and be heard in these days," said the Rev. Mr. Loew, stressing that conscience, character and respect constituted the worth of Christian living.

Today's program will open with religious services at the Central Y. M. C. A. A discussion period and tour of the Federal Bureau of Investigation will follow. J. Edgar Hoover will greet them. Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder will speak at a luncheon in the Library of Congress cafeteria.

Later in the day, the delegates will meet for further discussions, and also for a banquet and dance in Barker Hall of the Y. W. C. A. John J. Corson, director of the bureau of old age and survivors' insurance of the Social Security Board, will speak.

Discussion groups in Reformation Church tomorrow morning will consider such issues as "Crime Prevention," with Inspector J. R. Sears, of the FBI, leading; "Transient Youth," David Linden, of the public assistance division, Bureau of Public Welfare, and "Careers" and "Balanced Personalities," conducted by Dreng Bjornaraa, in charge of placement in the employment division of the Social Security Board.

Laughton Offers Vivid Portrayal in Filmed Du Maurier Novel; 'Laugh Factory' Hits

"JAMAICA INN." Mayflower picturization of the novel by Daphne du Maurier, adapted to the screen by Sidney Gilliat, Joan Harrison and J. B. Priestley, starring Charles Laughton, with Maureen O'Hara, Leslie Banks, Marie Ney, Emlyn Williams and many more. Directed by Alfred Hitchcock. Previewed November 24. At the Earle Theater.

The half-demented deviltry—it finally reaches complete proportions—of Charles Laughton, in the role of Sir Humphrey Pengallan, in his own and Erich Pommer's picturization of Daphne du Maurier's roaring novel of "Jamaica Inn," plus the genial lunacy of Joe Cook and his cohorts in "Laugh Factory," on the stage, exerted a two-ply pull at the Earle Theater yesterday. It attracted capacity audiences representative of the opposite poles of amusement taste. Lovers of raw and ravaging melodrama got their fill of dirty work on the Cornwall coast in Miss du Maurier's perfect vehicle for Mr. Laughton and those with an eye and ear for nonsense were repaid by a composite of the Joe Cook of all his successful musical comedies, revues and vaudeville acts. The combination is a very imposing serving of entertainment, indeed.

BELL

All of the elements of gripping "chills-and-fever" drama are present in "Jamaica Inn." The action is initiated with a raging storm at sea, the plotted foundering of a rich cargo boat, the murder of its crew and the later gathering of the pirates at the inn to divide the loot. The master mind of all this brigandage is immediately revealed as the pompous Sir Hurphrey Pengallan, squire of the county and seemingly its sole aristocrat, who only that evening has given asylum to a beautiful young girl taken past her destination by a timorous stage driver, afraid to discharge her at the inn lest, by pausing, he lose his coach, his horses and possibly his life.

Is Story of Violence

The career of Squire Pengallan then is traced through a series of violent events that encompass murder, an attempted hanging, a joust with the law in the person of Jim Trehearne, who has joined the cutthroat gang to turn up the powerful figure at the bottom of it all, and all manner of other developments, to his own self-destruction to close the picture as sensationally as it had opened.

"Jamaica Inn" is a stark, tragic and forbidding drama, made palatable by the skill with which it is acted and has been produced. The storms at sea set the mood and tempo for all of the savage business that follows. Under the thin veneer of his illicit wealth and the magnificence in which he lives, Pengallan is as savage as the picturesque cutthroats over whom he rules. In the hands of Charles Laughton, however, the role becomes an engrossing study in mental derangement, colossal egotism, arrogance and unbridled knavery. It is played with a consummate command of every resource of an actor of amazing versatility. Laughton's masking of his brutish instincts under the superficial polish of a grand gentleman is an impressive bit of artistry.

The action of the melodrama is not wholly dedicated to death and destruction. Through it also runs a thread of romance, personified by Trehearne, the persecuted hero of the piece, and Mary, the Irish lass who finds herself plunged into a maelstrom of piracy and murder in which her sister and her husband are ring-leaders. These roles of Joss Merlyn and his wife, Patience, are played in rich contrast by Leslie Banks and Marie Ney. Mary introduces Maureen O'Hara to American audiences as an ingenuous and at times fiery young actress of striking beauty and a youthful vigor that serves her well as the symbol of the play's scant tribute to human virtue. Another pivotal figure is played by Emlyn Williams, taking a sabbatical holiday from his usual sort of assignment to portray one of the most cold-blooded of the pirate killers.

The grim nature of the story has been given especially appropriate background on the rocky Cornwall coast. The howling of the winds and the lashing of the sea give the play an early and true keynote. In his direction, Alfred Hitchcock has thrown subtlety to those howling winds and laid bare the bloody structure of his drama without concealment.

Joe Cook Still Tops

An entirely different tone is struck by Master Cook and his specialists and stooges in the "Laugh Factory" stage revue. All the "howling wind" encountered in this segment of the entertainment is that generated by the laughter of the audience. Joe Cook, of course, is the mainspring of everything that goes on, barring the intervals devoted to the 20 Chester Hale Texas Comets, Sager and Sherman's dancing and the Deweys' juggling, in which, incidentally, Joe also takes a comic hand.

There is only one Joe Cook. In his own inimitably droll fashion he spouts his wacky monologues, explains why he won't imitate four Hai-way-ans, introduces his "Boulder Dam Construction Company Swing Band"—which ought to turn Rube Goldberg green with envy—sings a song, indulges in a few tricky gymnastics and otherwise demonstrates again that he is the best clown of them all.

The Paramount News presents an exclusive microphone appearance of Queen Elizabeth of England, with interlarded views of the royal visit to America last summer, in which she pays tribute to the women of England and their silent heroism in this time of crisis.

The orchestra's "Stars and Stripes" overture, arranged in many musical forms by Freddie Clark, completes a bill of wide range and abundant diversion.

Story of Colonial Heroism Alive With Action and Color; Short Subjects Worthy

"DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of the novel by Walter D. Edmonds, adapted to the screen by Lamar Trotti and Sonya Levien, costarring Claudette Colbert and Henry Fonda, with Edna May Oliver, Eddie Collins, John Carradine, Doris Bowdon, Jessie Ralph, Arthur Shields, Robert Lowery, Roger Imhof, Francis Ford, Ward Bond, Kay Linaker, Russell Simpson, Spencer Charters, Si Jenks, Arthur Aylesworth, Chief Big Tree, Paul McVey, Lionel Pape, Edwin Maxwell, Robert Greig and Clara Blandick. Directed by John Ford. Previewed November 21. At Loew's Palace Theater.

It would be difficult to summon to mind a human emotion that has not been woven into the dramatic fabric of Twentieth Century-Fox's picturization of Walter D. Edmonds' novel of "Drums Along the Mohawk," disclosed yesterday for the first time to the Washington public on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. It runs through the whole gamut of human experience—gentle romance, lusty comedy, the crimson horrors of primitive warfare, individual and community heroism, sacrifice, suffering and triumph and the awesome business of both birth and death.

Director John Ford has unfolded this far-flung tale of pioneer life in upper New York State in a series of scenes drawn to expansive scale. An expert beyond many of his fellow-craftsmen in this sort of thing, he has made the screen a vast panorama of life itself—life lived under the constant threat of disaster and trying the souls of men as well as their Spartan women.

To add to the realism of so comprehensive a drama, Technicolor has outdone itself in the matter of color treatment that is as strikingly beautiful as it is within the bounds of actuality. The fine coalescence of all these vital factors in successful picture-making would be largely lost if the cast did not so fully grasp every opportunity to make "Drums Along the Mohawk" a living and compelling document.

The Spirit of America

There is, needless to say, a tremendous surge of the true spirit of Americanism in every foot of the film, but sound entertainment and the vitalization of an inspiring chapter in the growth of our country's idependence, through the fortitude of a little band of settlers who loved liberty and the pursuit of happiness enough to fight for them, go happily in hand. The two characters about whom the whole movement of the saga revolves are played by Claudette Colbert, as the aristocratic young woman who grew into the soil of the wilderness, and Henry Fonda, as her husband, intent on wresting comfort and a competence from the earth. Their portrayals are cut to heroic measure.

The players supporting them in roles of almost equal importance are many and able. Edna May Oliver, as the clipped-speech Widow McKlennar, who defied even the Indians; Arthur Shields, as the village parson, as practical as he was devout; Ward Bond, as the handsome young giant of the settlement; John Carradine, the British troublemaker, with his marauding savages, and Chief Big Tree, the friendly red man, are a few of the more prominent of these. Francis Ford, Doris Bowdon, Robert Lowery, Roger Imhof, the testy general who fell victim to an enemy bullet first and primitive surgery later; Paul McVey, Edwin Maxwell, Robert Greig, Clara Blandick and all the others named in small type at the top of this column do yeomen's service in the interest of the picture's integrity.

An Epochal Film

The Indian raids, defense of the burning stockade, destruction of the handmade log homesteads, the scenes of simple pastoral life in times of tempoarary peace and all of the other diversified activities that go to make up this vast mosaic are so efficiently pictured in their natural hues that "Drums Along the Mohawk" at once becomes one of the genuinely noteworthy releases of the year.

Robert Benchley's latest gem of advice to the world, "See Your Doctor"—you know he'd make that one funny—a cartoon comedy, "Wicky-Wacky Romance," and the new issue of the picturized "News of the Day," are the Palace short subjects that round out a program that is enthusiastically recommended to everyone whose nerves can stand a little tension.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Dec. 1.

ROBERT MORLEY: The producers of the movie, "Volpone"—which will be made in New York—now want you to play the lead. Rouben Mamoulian will direct the picture if the censorship problem can be avoided.

J. EDGAR HOOVER: The report in the corridors of the Federal Courthouse here is that you're expected to come up and talk to the judge presiding over Lepke's case—concerning promises made to Lepke when he surrendered, in return for saving the Government search-and-reward money . . . Leo McCarey: Gene Fowler, who was injured with you in that auto crash this week, was about to start a column for a Los Angeles paper . . . Sam Goldwyn: When Jimmy Roosevelt leaves your employ January 1 to become a producer at RKO, you'll lose another aide—Fred Storm, the White House correspondent who became your publicity chief. He'll go with Jimmy.

SAM H. HARRIS: When Alexander Woollcott started his cross-country lecture tour one of his engagements was at Amherst College. Stanley King, president of Amherst, must have seen your production of "The Man Who Came to Dinner" . . . The prexy wrote to Woollcott, in extending the invitation: "You need have no fears. We've cleared the ice from the front doorstep."

WILL HAYS: When Ambassador Joe Kennedy returns for the Christmas holidays he'll discuss some movie deals—because when Kennedy quits his current assignment he'll return to the picture business. . . . Grover Whalen: John Ringling North, head of the Ringling Circus, and Michael Todd, producer of "The Hot Mikado," will take the Clipper for Europe today. They're both seeking entertainers for shows here . . . F. D. R.: The 1940 calendars of the National Retail Dry Goods Association is taking no chances on your holiday changes. Even in '40, November 21 is listed as Thanksgiving Day . . . Jim Farley: The Newspaper Guild will crack at the third term shortly.

NOEL COWARD: The British Intelligence Department has discovered the identity of the Englishman who broadcast pro-Nazi speeches, with an Oxford accent, from the Berlin radio station. He's a disappointed actor who left the country, embittered, when he was unable to secure a part in a London play called "Hay Fever" . . . John D. M. Hamilton: You expressed surprise at the President's indication—which appeared on Wednesday's front pages—that the Democratic National Convention might be postponed until September. That story was published in this column on November 20 . . . Jimmy Hines: Dixie Davis, who went to a Western hospital, received permission to leave the jurisdiction. He and his wife had been living near here most of the time as guests of a prominent actress.

ALFRED HITCHCOCK: Dave Selznick has ordered Judith Anderson back to Hollywood for retakes in the movie version of "Rebecca." Miss Anderson's performance, he says, was so perfect—and he wants it a bit hammy, so that the typical movie audiences will get it . . . Alf Landon: Wisconsin's Republicans have found a way to get rid of Gov. Heil and of the State mess his administration has created. They'll run him for the Senate . . . Benny Goodman: When the Center Theater was redone for "Swingin' the Dream" the workmen couldn't unearth that $6,000 organ, which disappeared when masons closed up the wall around it while the theater was being built.

CLARK GABLE: You and every other Hollywood star purchased memberships in the new million-dollar club at Arrowhead Lake . . . Hollywood's greatest figures in the field of entertainment are officials of that club and approved the plans for the new buildings . . . Now that the work is all completed and preparations were made for the opening festivities this week, the Great Minds of Entertainment had to go out and hire a tent for dancing—because they had completely forgotten to build a dance floor.

'Intermezzo' Is Distinguished By a New Star

Ingrid Bergman Charms In Capitol's Film; Larry Adler on Stage

"INTERMEZZO—A LOVE STORY." Selznick International Pictures production of an original scenario by Gosta Stevens and Gustav Molander, adapted to the screen by George O'Neil, starring Leslie Howard, with Ingrid Bergman, Edna Best, John Halliday, Cecil Kellaway, Enid Bennett, Ann Todd, Douglas Scott and Eleanor Wesselhoeft. Directed by Gregory Ratoff. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Capitol Theater

A romantic and generally restrained film, "Intermezzo—A Love Story" opened yesterday at the Capitol Theater to reveal a striking personality from Sweden, Ingrid Bergman, sharing a triangle with two well-bred Britishers, Leslie Howard and Edna Best.

In substance "Intermezzo—A Love Story" has much in common with its fellows in the contemporary circle of triangular situations. A fresh influence, personified by a charming and admirable girl, breaks what has become a monotonous relationship between a man and the woman he once loved well enough to marry. "Love Affair," "In Name Only," "When Tomorrow Comes" and the superb "We Are Not Alone" were of this fundamental situation. In this Selznick International film, in which Mr. Howard was a co-producer, the "other woman" has again become a lady.

But the story is handled in a compellingly fresh manner. Hardly ever do the stormy scenes of family melodrama come within the focus of Director Ratoff's camera. It is largely through suggestion that one becomes aware that the concert violinist and the piano instructor to his daughter have declared their love for each other. It is just this restraint which makes the film an adult and "different" picture.

Repeats Swedish Triumph

Miss Bergman, however, is the film's greatest single asset, bringing credit to the producer of "Gone With the Wind" for his courage in presenting so unfamiliar a face in so trying a characterization. The creator of the role in the original Swedish version, she also brings an accomplished piano technique that lends great plausibility to the part. Youthful and disarmingly natural, she veers the film away from a tendency toward the sentimental.

As the successful violinist, who seeks to recapture the more intoxicating days of his youth, Mr. Howard is naturally at ease. His Holger Brandt is a sensitive dreamer who loves his home and family. The never-ruffled Miss Best plays his wife, knowing that soaring romance is over for them both, but unable to convey that truth to her husband until they have undergone great suffering. How this suffering arises is revealed in a realistic sequence out of pitch with the rest of the telling, but which, nevertheless, serves its purpose.

Its settings in Sweden and southern France bring a distinctive interest which the work would otherwise lack and the supporting players are admirably in the reflective mood of the piece.

"Hail to the Redskins!"

Activities on the Capitol stage this week are many and enjoyable. Larry Adler, the headliner, earns his position, bringing his versatile "mouth organ" to make a veritable harmonica-symphony concerto out of the Brahms Second Hungarian Rhapsody. He brings down the house with it but don't let him get away without doing his "Rhapsody Americana," which he calls by the happier, homier title of "American Folk Tunes."

Ruth Craven is at her best when chanting Cole Porter's "The Ozarks Are Callin' Me Home" and "Oh, Johnnie!" A clever puppeteer is Frank Paris, climaxing his ten minutes with an "Ice Follies" miniature. Bob Robinson and Virginia Martin, an attractive couple, put youthful exuberance into their trickily tempoed dances. Carter and Holmes are a knock-about duo.

Sam Jack Kaufman celebrates his holdover engagement with an explosive "Overture of Overtures" and genial introductions. Finally, in Gene Ford's latest innovation to bring the curtain down with a bang, the Rockets have their third routine in the revue. They whip into the "Redskin Romp," a fandango that should make the local football boys do their best tomorrow afternoon against the New York Giants.

A short subject on "Boys' Clubs," a Terry Toon and the latest Fox Movietone News complete a bill that is agreeably entertaining.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 1 (INS).—"The Count of Monte Cristo" was the only picture Robert Donat ever made in this country and while the Alexandre Dumas story was a big success, Donat promptly shook the dust of Hollywood from his feet—and hasn't returned since. Last year, Eddie Small reissued the picture and it made more money than any other repeat ever released by United Artists. Now Eddie, weary of waiting for his contract troubles with Donat to be ironed out, isn't postponing a sequel any longer. He's going to do "The Son of Monte Cristo" with Louis Hayward in the star spot.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Few young actors had more remarkable success this year than Louis Hayward. "The Man in the Iron Mask," while not hailed as a great picture by the critics, simply cleaned up at the box-office. And I hear he is turning in a splendid acting job in "My Son, My Son." Rowland Lee, who directed Donat in the original in 1934, will again handle the megaphone on the sequel.

Remember I told you that Bonnie Baker was the riot of San Francisco, singing "Oh, Johnny," with Orrin Tucker's band at the Mark Hopkins? Well, Universal has signed this cute youngster and is putting Bonnie immediately into a picture already under way starring Tom Brown and Peggy Moran. It didn't have an official title before but, with the advent of Bonnie, it will be called—guess what?—"Oh, Johnny, How You Can Love." It's a natural considering that the records of this old tune have hit an all-time high in sales. The East is just as crazy about it as the Coast and if Bonnie isn't a wow in her debut, singing "Oh, Johnny," all our gang and everybody in San Francisco will be surprised.

Irene Castle and her husband, Frederic McLaughlin, who have been separated for two-and-a-half years, have made up their differences and are reconciled again in Chicago. The news leaked out when Irene called a friend on the Coast who was going to make a deposition for her and told her it wouldn't be necessary "because we're back together again." When I talked with Irene while she was in Hollywood last year supervising "The Life of Vernon and Irene Castle," I suspected this estrangement might be patched up because she was miserable being separated from her 15-year-old daughter, Barbara.

Snapshots of Hollywood and Pittsburgh collected at random: Eleanor Powell and Randy Scott at the preview of "Joe and Ethel Turp Call on the President," hand-in-hand; Dwight Taylor, in Hollywood, receiving word that his mother, Laurette Taylor, is back in her Chicago play, "Outward Bound," completely recovered from a heart attack; Jane Bryan gets in Hollywood Tuesday after a month in New York; Louise Stanley entertaining Cary Grant, Rudy Vallee, Adison Randall and Cobina Wright, jr., at a luncheon party at the Somerset House; John Steinberg is reopening Hollywood's famous "Troc" during the holidays and his silent partner is Abe Lyman (who will not play); just before we left Philadelphia, June Preiser appeared at the Philadelphia Junior Chamber of Commerce luncheon and wowed them with a talk; also Jerry Bergen and Billy Gray, who were on the same bill with us, gave the gang a great sendoff at "Benny—the Bum's," which isn't what it sounds like, but is one of the best eating places in town.

Mike Levee hosting a stag for a party of 60 at the House of Murphy; hear Eddie Norris, who always used to be with Margaret Lindsay, has been taking Anita Howard (the former Mrs. Lin to her favorite dancing spots; hear Jean Arthur's clothes for "Too Many Husbands" are terrific—marking the first time Jean has appeared as a fashion model on the screen; I'd like to tell the Hollywood producers that as long as the 800 mothers and wives we met at the "Mainland Sewing Club" are interested in movies—they have nothing to worry about.

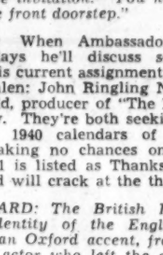
That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Dec. 1.

In "The Great Victor Herbert" Paramount has one of the great pictures of the year. It brings back the dear, dead days of yesterday which we keep talking about and makes them (if possible) more fascinating than they were when we were living them. The days when Victor Herbert and David Belasco got more attention and had more flowers thrown at them when they marched at the head of the Lamb's Parade than all the top stars of America. It takes you back in memory to Geraldine Farrar's closing performance at the Metropolitan when they actually took the horses off her carriage, and her fans pulled it, with her inside, to Central Park. I never heard Fritzi Scheff sing "Kiss Me Again" but I can't imagine her thrilling an audience more than this Susanne Foster, a 14-year-old child with a top note that lifts you out of your seat. I'll bet Metro's kicking itself because they kept Alan Jones under contract—and idle—for a whole year. And Mary Martin's story of singing at the Troc here where everybody saw and heard her and then having to go to New York to make good before anybody here would sign her is traditional of our town. Here is a combination that will be hard to beat. And Walter Connolly looked so like Herbert at times, it was uncanny. If you love the music of Herbert, you'll be thrilled through your backbone at the picture. If the exploitation is as good as the picture, they'll be able to pay off the Paramount debt with this one.



HOPPER

Writer Bob Presnell has turned out a swell story with authentic material given by Roger Manning. It's called "Salute to the Living," which shows the United States has secretly corraled all the little islands adjacent to the Equator, which automatically will move our air service westward. Bob knows how hard it is to get the big shots to read his story, so got Alberto Vargas, a Peruvian artist, to illustrate. So now three studios want it. Which is an original way of selling your brainchild.

I'm so grateful that Bill O'Connor left his Wall Street pupils and has taken up his residence and business here, because he gave me exercises which only take three minutes a day to do, and already I've tucked in my tummy, and it's stayed tucked in—and taken off 2 inches. He takes corsets off the ladies and belts off the men. And I'm saying "Amen" to O'Connor and the best of luck to him . . . Vic Mature had a few uneasy moments in "1,000,000 B. C." when he fell in the path of an elephant who was to be chasing him. But "Queenie" is a trained beast, and jumped right over him. Incidentally, the miniature work in this, which is excellent, is being done by Hal Roach, jr., but under an assumed name.

Donald Crisp wanted to buy a boat, so posted a $10.00 check with an English friend who had just what he wanted. Then the friend wired he had an offer from a Spaniard who wanted to lease boat for a year. So, Donald agreed and sale was not to go through until boat had been returned. Don's check was merely a deposit. But neither the Spaniard nor the boat have been seen since—the owner hears it's fallen into the hands of gunrunners. Yes, Donald's hoping he'll get his check back.

104,000 Fans to See Army-Navy Classic Today

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

West Chester Country Club, Rye, N. Y., Dec. 1.—This may sound like heresy of some sort, but it's high time a couple of illusions were shattered anyway.

Tomorrow at Philadelphia, Army and Navy will take the field in what is supposed to be the epitome of the die-for-dear-old-Rutgers spirit of football. Army vs. Navy—That's when football fever is supposed to blow its topper and send onto the field two teams blazing with esprit de corps and a high passion for victory.

POVICH

We'll take vanilla. We'll take the game at the Polo Grounds the following day between the Washington Redskins and the New York Giants—old Washing-Done A. C. vs. Tenth Ave. Tech. With no slur intended on college football, much less on the high Llama affair between Army and Navy, we are not convinced that tomorrow's game at Philadelphia will be any more passionately fought than Sunday's battle of the pros if, indeed, it can hold a candle to the pro game.

Sure, we know that the pros are playing for Alma Mazuma but the power of the pay check is pretty potent. It may not be as high-sounding an inspiration as the glories of Alma Mater, but it is apt to endure longer. However, that isn't our point. Our point is that the pros can work up a zest for battle that is at least equal to the collegiate flavor and, backed by superior skill, highlights that zest to even greater degree.

Pure phooey is the idea that the pros play football merely for their pay checks. In the first place, they've got to love that old game to be able to play it well enough to be invited into the pro league. They've got to love it or they wouldn't take all those bumps, even as the college players, and in the pro league the bumps are harder.

Chance for Dramatics Passed Up

The most overrated aspect of college football is the high-pressure pre-game speech in the dressing room, Frank Dobson, Maryland's coach, was saying not long ago. "Our boys are getting smarter," said Dobson, "they won't stand for the moving picture stuff we used to be able to give them.

"I had a grand chance to go dramatic before our last game of this season when Maryland was playing Syracuse. My boys didn't know that after the game I was going to resign as coach. Those Maryland boys liked me. I could have given them a pep talk that would have whipped 'em into a passion to win that game for me. It was the chance you'd think a coach wouldn't pass up. But I didn't tell them a word about my resignation. Actually, it wouldn't have done any good. I know what sort of emotion that stuff produces—emotion that lasts about two minutes after the opening whistle. It's no good."

Dobson was saying that his chief source of wonder is that Ray Flaherty manages, week after week, to keep his professionals inspired, hard bitten old-timers like Turk Edwards and Jim Barber and Ernie Pinckert and Charlie Malone who apparently are football business men but on the field act like fresh young collegians giving their all. "Flaherty must be a master with men to keep those fellows keyed up," said Dobson. "Don't forget, he's not dealing with boys."

Ernie Thrilled Before Each Battle

Ernie Pinckert, eight years a star in the professional league, is a living lie to the belief that the pros become jaded with their profession and continue to play football only as a means of livelihood. Pinckert plays football because he thinks it's high good fun. He could have retired years ago to his profitable sporting goods business in Philadelphia.

You ought to see him before a game. In the dressing room he's as impetuous as a 2-year-old colt, literally chafing for action. He actually trembles at the scent of battle. His pay check at that time is probably farthest from his mind. Pinckert has earned a reputation as the roughest, fiercest blocker in the league and he has been even charged with being a dirty football player. But that last isn't true. He merely carries onto the field the tremendous emotion built up in the pre-game wait for action

Pinckert actually isn't aware of any great difference between pro and college football as far as mental attitude is concerned, he says. "When that opening whistle blows, it's just another ball game. The fellow who loafs is going to get hurt. You've got to play hard to keep from getting hurt. That's the way I played in college and it's the only way I know how to play football."

In the Redskins line on Sunday will be men playing side by side, some of whom will be making $250 a game and others the minimum of $125. And in the backfield, Sammy Baugh will be flanked by blockers who are being paid approximately one-tenth of Baugh's salary for the same game, but to the everlasting credit of pro football that fact doesn't seem to make any difference.

Victory Means More Than Salary

We're safe in saying that the same conditions apply to the Giants. Disparity in wages does not make for any jealousy among the pros, particularly after that opening whistle blows. And there will be men on both teams who normally would be in the hospital, nursing aches and bruises but they wouldn't have it otherwise. Andy Farkas' right leg is taped from ankle to thigh and he walks with an effort, but on Sunday he'll be running in high glee.

Charlie Malone wants to play on at least one more championship team. It's just an ideal of his. And he thinks it would be pretty awful if when he goes back to his Silver Spring, Md., home on Sunday he has to explain to Mrs. Malone and their two tykes why daddy couldn't beat the Giants.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Rye, N. Y., Dec. 1.—Full of Scotch, we came to Rye today to look over those princely bourbons of pro football, the Washington Redskins. Unlike hockey teams, this is no Canadian Club, and after a look at the retinue and a talk with their incomparable Andy Farkas we've decided that the only trouble they'll have with the Old Men of Manhattan Sunday is running up more than a 20 point advantage.

CONSIDINE

For the benefit of the sports writers, Sammy Baugh limped about the Westchester Country Club practice field. He is expected to do very little running and blocking against the Giants and may have to confine himself to passing. He is said to be a promising passer, though this may be nothing more than a bit of propaganda ingeniously launched by the team's able general manager, J. Kingsbury Espey.

We had lunch with Farkas, to our mind one of the most amazing football players who ever lived. He is the fellow who made the Washington fans stop mooning over the departure of Cliff Battles. The most ferocious-looking runner we've ever seen, he already has smashed all pro league records for touchdowns in a single season.

He's of Magyar descent. Father went to the University of Budapest. Anvil Andy has that square Hungarian head on which a trench hat looks so becoming. But when he smiles and when he talks he's as American as a hotdog. Only 23 or 24, and hailed as a rookie sensation in the pro league, this is his fourteenth year of football. He played four

Canadian Six Defeats Eagles Before 2,681

Bigger, Smarter Visitors Take Early 2-0 Lead, Dominate Game Throughout; Davies Scores For Locals; Goalie Lee Again a Standout

By Jack Munhall.

That a good, big team can beat a good little team was demonstrated once again last night when the towering Canadian All-Stars overpowered the Washington Eagles, 4-1, in an Eastern Amateur Ice Hockey League match at Riverside Stadium.

Before a fine turnout of 2,681 lustily cheering fans who were standing in their seats throughout most of a rough but unusually well-played fray, the Canadians used their superior physical advantages to the utmost, took a 2-0 lead in the first period and were never seriously threatened.

The Eagles, making the finest showing of their home season, simply were outsmarted and outclassed. And although they came back in the second period to score and pull to 1-2, while the Canadians were a player shy, at no time did they appear the likely winners.

Little Gorden Lee continued his sensational goal guarding for the Eagles, compiling the astounding total of 40 saves. But he was like a David against Goliaths as he gallantly tried to protect his net against the fierce charging and clever skating visitors. They spouted shots with the force and accuracy of a fire hose.

The Canadians, current undefeated league leaders of the Senior Ontario Hockey Association, appeared far and away the best team to invade Riverside this season as they continued to victimize Eastern League teams. Previous victors over the Baltimore Orioles (6-4 in overtime) and the Jersey Skeeters, 7-1, the Northerners presented a splendid first line in Center John Inglis and Wings Eddie King and John Flaherty, the latter Canada's leading scorer in 1938.

The Eagles bottled O'Flaherty but they couldn't stop his running mate, Inglis, who accounted for two goals, one of them unassisted, on a powerful one-man sally in the fourth period.

Jock McLean Bidding for Pro Grid Team

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, Dec. 1.—The lure of professional football is attacking Jock McLean, youthful scion of Washington (D. C.) wealth, who has entered the bidding for a franchise in the National League.

McLean seeks to buy into the league, either by purchasing or establishing a new league affiliation. He has offered to buy the Pittsburgh franchise, according to reports, but Owner Rooney is refusing to sell despite the Pirates' financial losses.

McLean is hopeful that the league will expand to 12 teams, in which event he would probably seek to establish a team in Boston. Cincinnati has also been mentioned as a probable site for a new league team, but young McLean would prefer to own a club in a town where his family does not have newspaper interests.

None of the present ten franchises in the league are for sale, according to informed sources, but there has been a movement to admit two new cities to the circuit.

Title Monopoly Is Ruled Out In New York

Fighters Can Hold But One Crown Under Ruling in Gotham

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 1.—The New York State boxing commission today wrote into its books a rule forbidding a boxer from holding more than one title at the same time. The rule was established after Promoter Mike Jacobs had canceled the twice postponed welterweight championship bout between Champion Henry Armstrong and Lou Ambers, the lightweight king.

Armstrong, who at one time held the feather, light and welterweight crowns, was advised to take a week's rest following an examination that showed him to have the symptoms of one just getting over an illness. Henry had to call off his bout with Ambers, last set for December 1, because of a bad cold.

Redskins Feverishly Drill for N. Y. Game

Morning, Afternoon Sessions Augmented By Lecture at Night; Injuries Clearing Up Nicely in De Luxe Health Center

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Rye, N. Y., Dec. 1.—Far, far from the metropolis' maddening rush, the Redskins are awaiting Sunday's battle with the Giants, but not in idleness. Today, in the quietude of the Westchester Country Club grounds, they staged morning and afternoon practice sessions and tonight they listened to a long lecture by Coach Ray Flaherty.

There is a feverish note to the Redskins' activity here. Flaherty and his staff are making intensive efforts to cure the squad's last remaining cripples, and Turk Edwards, Charley Malone and Andy Farkas were excused from practice to receive the ministrations of trainers.

In the de luxe health center of the Westchester Club, replete with steam baths, fancy electric apparatus and diathermy gadgets, Edwards, Malone and Farkas spent most of the day. The bulky Edwards subjected his knee to baking treatment and Farkas was treated for muscle injuries extending from his ankle to his thigh. Malone has a charley horse in his right leg that has constricted the muscles into a large knot above the knee.

Troubles at Home

Thus Flaherty, in the light of his own injury problem, is paying little heed to the "bear stories" out of the Giants' camp. "We're banged up as much as they are, probably more, but you are hearing more about the Giants' injuries," said Flaherty.

Despite their assorted aches and pains, Edwards, Farkas and Malone will be in the Redskins' starting line-up barring further setbacks, said Flaherty. "They want to start and I think that is the better plan," he said.

Today Flaherty's scouts, who all season have been tabbing the Giants for him, reported in person to the Redskins' coach. Flaherty heard

2,000 Middies Will Invade Quaker City

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Dec. 1.—With the football warriors already at the scene of action, the regiment of nearly 2,000 midshipmen eagerly awaits the move on Philadelphia tomorrow for the annual service classic. Meanwhile enthusiasm and confidence over the outcome of the batle continued to mount. Throughout the day and late into the night the middies continued their singing and cheering. And there is not a fan in this ballwick who looks for anything but a Navy victory.

With banners flying and marching to music of the academy band, the Middies will move from the naval reservation to the Short Line station where they will board five special trains that will carry them to the Quaker City.

Some several hundred naval folk and civilian fans also will make the trip. The specials will pull away at five-minute intervals, starting at 8 o'clock. Official Navy headquarters will be at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel.

Granting the Tars are winding up an otherwise inglorious season, close followers of the team feel

Cadets Given Slight Edge On Air Game

Quaker City Jammed With Football-Mad Mob; President to Attend Service Game

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Dec. 1.—The businessmen's lunch now offers you grapefruit as well as soup, and costs $1.50 instead of 65 cents. Hotels are throwing up cots in hallways and selling sleeping space in spare bathtubs. Philadelphia, in other words, is in its annual stride for the Army-Navy football game.

So are the Army and the Navy. Under somber skies that held a threat of rain, Navy had a final limbering-up session this afternoon in the Temple University Stadium. The Cadets, whipping through a lively drill that featured forward passes, worked out in the huge Municipal Stadium, where, tomorrow, they will perform before some 104,000 spectators.

Of this number 101,616 will occupy seats that were sold for this fortieth episode in the service series, including 2,300 midshipmen and 1,800 Cadets. The others will include President Roosevelt and the entourage that travels with him, unless the weather should cause the Chief Executive to change his mind, ushers, vendors, guards and the usual impressive delegation from the working press.

Cadets Are Favored

As the advance guard of this sizeable turnout, largest of the 1939 gridiron season, moved into the city tonight, they found Army on the favorite's end of whatever odds were being quoted. Eight would get you five if you fancied the gray of West Point; five would get you seven if the Annapolis dark blue was more to your taste.

Off their records—probably the poorest either academy ever had brought into their annual game—there appeared little basis for drawing a line between them. In six major games, with Dartmouth, Notre Dame, Clemson, Penn, Columbia and Princeton, Navy's best showing was a scoreless tie with Dartmouth. In five major games,

Woodring Heads Army, Navy Exodus

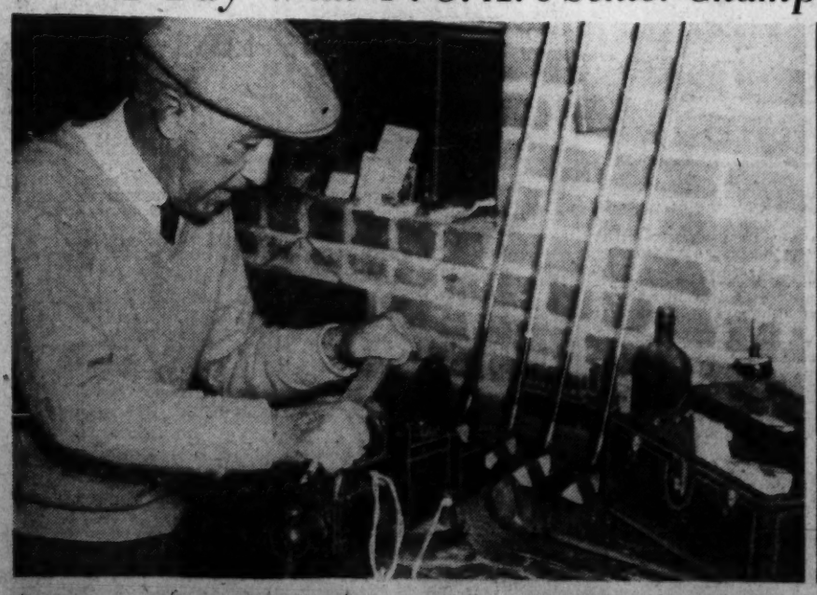
Secretary of War Harry Woodring and Acting Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison will lead an exodus of high-ranking service officials to Philadelphia this morning for the annual Army-Navy football classic.

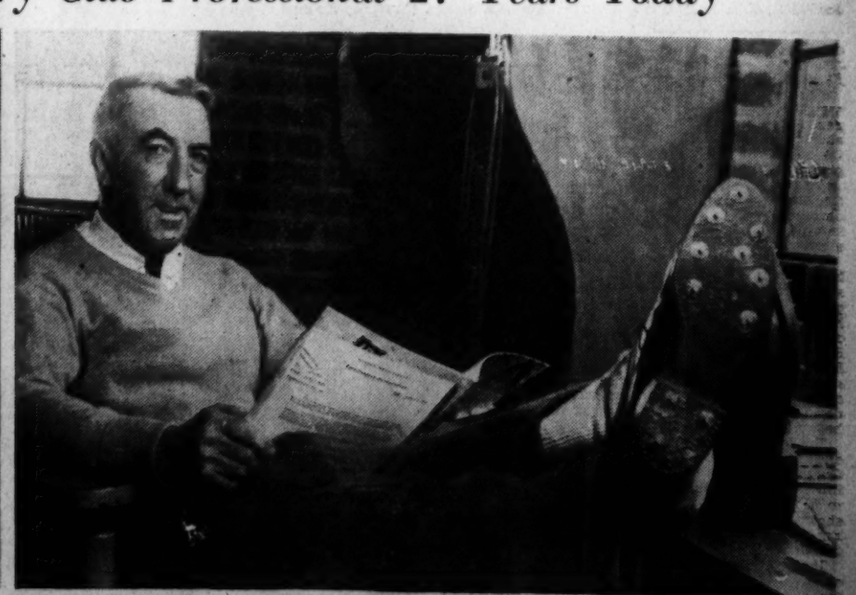
With Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, Rear Admiral Chester W. Nimitz and other ranking Navy chiefs leaving the city, the role of Acting Secretary of the Navy will fall to Rear Admiral William R. Furlong, chief of the Bureau of Ordnance.

Because all ranking Army officials eligible by law to become Acting Secretary of War in Woodring's absence will also be rooting for West Point in Philadelphia, the latter will have come to his office this morning and keep in touch with it all day by phone, officials said. Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson, like Woodring and Edison, will be host of a number of notables.

In Secretary Woodring's box will be such notables as Lord Lothian, British Ambassador; Secretary and Mrs. Harold Ickes and Mrs. Alfred duPont. Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and Attorney General Frank Murphy will head the list of high officials in Acting Secretary of the Navy Edison's box. Other celebrities will include Assistant Secretary of the Treasury J. W. Hanes, Under Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Edward Noble, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Robert, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Commander Ralph S. Riggs, and Mrs. Elizabeth Henny.

A Day With P. G. A.'s Senior Champ Freddie McLeod—Columbia Country Club Professional 27 Years Today





Just 27 years ago today, in the winter of 1912, Fred McLeod, then a youngster with his National Open crown just 4¼ years old, walked down the path of the Columbia Country Club where he was greeted by his assistant, D'Arcy (Reds) Banagan, who is still with him. Today Freddie has been there 27 years, one of the longest service pros at a single club in the country. He's now playing 36 holes a day, in preparation of a defense of his P. G. A. Senior's championship in Sarasota next month. He is pictured after a round of golf, resting between rounds in the shop, and touching off a repair job. McLeod came to Columbia from the St. Louis Country Club.

G. W. Closes Grid Season Today Against West Virginia

Wilamoski And Babich Are Ready

District Eleven Is Favored Over Mounts In Morgantown; To Honor Rodgers

The George Washington University football squad left by bus yesterday for Morgantown and its final game of the season today with West Virginia's Mountaineers.

The Colonials, victors over Kansas and Bucknell in their latest starts, will rule decided favorites over the oft-beaten Mountaineers, although West Virginia has been showing improvement recently.

George Washington will be in a bad psychological spot in this game, for not only is West Virginia determined to close a disastrous season with victory but also to allow "Sleepy" Glenn to bow out as head coach on the heels of a triumph. The West Virginia pilot, according to official reports, will be released following this season.

Two Stars Return

The Colonials will present their strongest line-up, with Quarterback Sam Babich and Halfback Ed Wilamoski both fully recovered from slight injuries which handicapped them in the Bucknell game last week.

The West Virginia-G. W. game, expected to attract upwards of 6,000 spectators, has been designated as "Rodgers Day" in honor of the Mountaineers' most famous athletic son, Ira Rodgers. Assistant coach is in his twenty-fifth year on the West Virginia campus.

The Mountaineers, who played perhaps their best football of the season in holding strong Kentucky to a 13-6 score November 18, have been drilling hard for George Washington, for they consider the Colonials one of the toughest teams on their schedule.

Coach Glenn has stressed to his squad that, despite G. W.'s three defeats, the Colonials have an impressive record. Their losses, Glenn declared, were to top-notch teams—Georgetown, Butler and Clemson—and none of the three was able to win by a margin of more than one touchdown.

Coach Bergman Is Surprised At Bowl Story

A. J. (Dutch) Bergman, head coach of football and director of athletics at Catholic University, yesterday expressed astonishment over reports the school had decided to accept an invitation to play in the Sun Bowl at El Paso, Tex., on New Year's Day.

"I only know what I read in the papers," Bergman declared. "So far as C. U. accepting a bid to the Sun Bowl is concerned, I can only say that we haven't even had an invitation."

"The only time we have heard from the Sun Bowl was before the St. Anselm game. We were asked if we would be interested in a bid, but were not definitely offered one. I understood from the letter that if we went undefeated we probably would have been invited."

Since C. U.'s upset defeat by St. Anselm, they have not lifted a hand to get any bowl bid, Bergman continued. Moreover he was not sure that Catholic would go to the Sun Bowl if the game was offered them.

Bergman's five-year contract as director of athletics expires this season, but as yet he has not discussed with school officials terms of a new contract.

That business must come up before the board and their next meeting probably will not be before June.

Naismith Paid Last Tribute

Lawrence, Kans., Dec. 1 (AP).—Dr. James A. Naismith, who gave basketball to the world, was buried today after brief church services.

Dr. Naismith, who gave up a ministerial career to teach physical education to young folk, died Tuesday after a heart attack, at the age of 78. He devised the hoop game 48 years ago.

Hundreds of friends from educational and athletic circles attended the funeral. The Rev. Theodore H. Askman, Presbyterian minister, described Dr. Naismith as "truly one of God's noblemen."

Army's best efforts brought ties with Columbia and Penn State, while the soldiers lost to Yale, Notre Dame and Harvard.

Army's position in the betting odds is based chiefly on Navy's deplorable weakness against passes. In an attempt to stop that gap, the middies' coach, Maj. Emery E. (Swede) Larson, will start the tallest backfield he can find, one that probably will include J. Philip Gutting, of Shelbyville, Ind., a "sophomore" who studied at Purdue but hasn't figured in any of the middies' earlier games.

However, Gutting has shown up well in this week's workouts. Besides, he stands 6 feet 1 inch and is a basketball player. That, Larson reasons, should make him a good man on defense against the aerials due to be tossed by Johnny Hatch, Army's first-string tailback from Fort Sill, Okla., as well as by his replacements, Ed Brown, of Oakland, Calif., and Herb Frawley, of Fort Myer, Va.

Clear Day Seen For Service Game

No rain in Philadelphia this afternoon was the Weather Bureau's prediction for the Army-Navy football game.

Washington today is due for rain in the morning, followed by clearing skies in the afternoon or evening, the bureau said.

Highest temperature here yesterday was 48 at 5 p. m., and the lowest, 32, at 4 a. m.

Miami Swamps N. C. State, 27 to 7

Miami Fla., Dec. 1 (AP).—Miami's Hurricanes further humiliated the luckless North Carolina State football team, 27-7, before a crowd of 11,420 tonight.

Held on even terms in the first half, the Miamians loosed three power drives for touchdowns in the last two periods.

Tampa Beaten By B. U. in Finale

Tampa, Fla., Dec. 1 (AP).—Boston University's husky terriers scored touchdowns in the third and fourth quarters here tonight to defeat the University of Tampa Spartans 12 to 0 in the final game on the local gridiron.

The game was played in ideal weather before 4,000 fans.

The Bostonians failed to gain through Tampa U.'s powerful line in the first half but recovered a fumble and intercepted a pass to get in scoring position in the last two periods.

Indian Spring Course to Be Cut to 9 Holes

New Owner Abandons Original Plan, but Promises Improvements

A. S. Kay, new owner of the Indian Spring Golf Club, notified the members by letters yesterday that he would be unable to guarantee an 18-hole layout for the coming year and only 9 holes of the course will be open after the ground is broken for homes, January 1.

Indian Spring Club Estate is the new name for the development that will take over the entire first 9 of the present course. Kay's original plans to save 18 holes for the members for at least a year, and build on one corner of the property, were abandoned.

Mrs. Alma Von Steiner, manager of the club, will put on a membership drive in the spring with dues for the nine-hole course $5 per month instead of the present $8 fee.

Swimming Pool Planned

Kay plans to add a swimming pool and a terrace for summer dancing to the club facilities. A new driveway and interior improvements to the clubhouse have already been made.

The course will be opened permanently for 9 holes, expected to be the present par 36 back 9 intact. It will remain as a selling point for the hundreds of homes that will be constructed on Washington's favorite tournament golf course.

Indian Spring is now the home club of most of the city's top notch men and women golfers, but the resignation of many are already in the hands of club officials, and this announcement is expected to send the others scattering to other 18-hole clubs around the city.

However the club will more than likely receive a full quota of new members under the $5 plan but its days as a tournament scene are over. M. W. W.

their reports and said, succinctly: "To me they sound like the same old Giants."

The Redskins' camp, players and coaches, know in detail the task they will be facing on Sunday. They know that they must check the running game of Tuffy Leemans, Les Barnum, Bull Karcis and Eddie Miller, and they know they must rush Ed Danowski on his passing attempts or the Giants may run away with the ball game.

Any satisfaction the Redskins may have felt at reports that Leemans would see little action on account of his damaged leg was tempered by the realization that Karcis would be in the Giants' backfield when Leemans wasn't. The big former Carnegie Tech back has always raised hob with the Redskins' line with his bulling charges.

This morning's workout was given over chiefly to the photographers, but in the afternoon the Redskins staged a practice devoted wholly to signal drill and passing. Not even dummy scrimmages were held, with Flaherty refusing to risk aggravation of any old injuries.

Two Duos Alternate

Sammy Baugh and Frank Filchock were flinging their copyrighted passes during the latter workout, and that that passing will be the keynote of the Redskins' attack is plain enough. The Filchock-Farkas team, which will start the game, will be replaced at the opening of the second quarter by the Baugh-Dick Todd combination.

"I know one thing emphatically," said Flaherty. "We're well scouted. The Giants have had men on our trail since the start of the season. But we haven't showed all of our tricks yet. I think we have something in reserve for Sunday."

New York ticket scalpers are enjoying a field day as the game nears. Manhattan fans, frantic for tickets to the battle which has captured the imagination of New Yorkers to a greater extent than any other game in the professional football's history, are being asked to pay $50 for a pair of the choice seats which originally sold for $2.20.

One Killed, Four Woundd as Pa. Deer Season Opens

Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 1 (AP).—Bullets meant for bucks killed one hunter and wounded at least four others today as 150,000 gunners blazed away in Pennsylvania's woods on the opening day of the deer hunting season. Eleven were killed during last year's six-day season.

Sixteen-year-old Raymond Elliott fell near his home in Chicora, Butler County, wounded fatally by a shot fired by a companion.

Honors for the first to kill a deer apparently went to Charles Wynnkoop, of Hamilton, who required only one minute after the legal hour for firing (7 a. m.), to drop his seven pointer. Nine minutes later Nick Zemo, of Washington, D. C., brought down a buck near Kane.

Jenkins' 174 Breaks Navy Pin Mark

Shop Roller Beats Previous Season Record by 8 Sticks

Red Jenkins, West Shop pinman in the Navy Yard League, turned in a game of 174 last night at Lucky Strike Alleys to crack the existing season record held by "Cowboy" Johnson by 8 pins. The effort helped him to high set of the night, 392, as well as his team to an odd-game decision over Torpedo Tube No. 1.

Despite high team game, 605, and high team set, 1,732, the Erecting five was edged out by a single game by F. and A.

In the Country Club League the leaders—Indian Spring No. 1—and the defending champions—Manor No. 1—managed for odd-game victories over Manor No. 2 and Manor No. 3, respectively. Art Urvan, of the leaders, turned in high game of the night, 150, and the defenders' Billy LaBille had high set, 393. Manor No. 1 also had 651 and 1769 to sweep team honors.

The leading Personnel five increased its margin in the Ladies I. D. R. A. League, Helen Cothran pacing the attack with game of 103 and set of 298.

TAKOMA

A 406 set by Lou Kraemer, good enough for a new season record in the Social Security League, wasn't good enough to keep Kraemer's Employment Security No. 3 team from losing a pair of games to Personnel. Kraemer had games of 135-151-120.

QUEEN PIN

Service Station, Diamond Cab League leader, was edged out by Southeast despite Elmer Wesley's 123-356. Concessions also took a 2-1 victory over Restaurant, with Bill Hutton out front with 117-339.

ARCADIA

Mary Goodman's 147 was high individually in the Ladies Independent League, and Margaret Lynn captured set honors with 350. A season record team game, 570, was rolled by Peerless and Vincent Beauty Shop took down the night's team set honors with 1,551.

American Association Schedule Is Approved

Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 1.—American Association directors approved a 154-game 1940 schedule today, opening April 18 and closing September 15, but postponed action on play-off plans. The season will open and close five days later than this year.

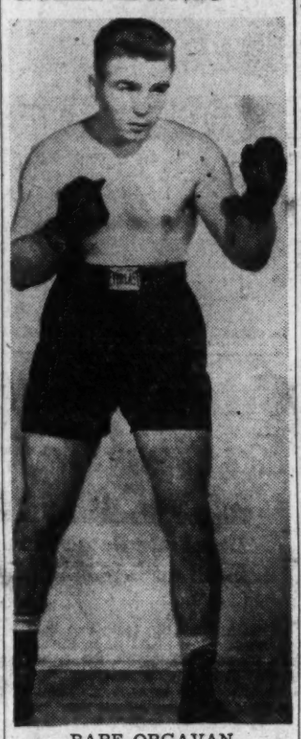
Overlin, Arena Fighter, Seeks Conn Battle



BABE ORGAVAN

Ken Overlin, world's ranking middleweight contender, who meets rough, tough, Babe Orgavon, of Teas, in the eight-round main event at Turner's Arena Monday night, will be meeting Billy Conn, Pittsburgh light-heavyweight champion of the world for the title soon, if Chris Dundee, Overlin's manager, is successful in selling the idea to Promoter Mike Jacobs tonight in New York.

The popular Dundee arrived in town for a brief stay to inform Promoter Goldie Ahearn that he is ging to press Promoter Jacobs the limit for this title shot, which Overlin earned by defeating Atlanta's cracks middleweight, Ben Brown, in Miami Monday night. Brown was declared ready for a title shot with Conn for the second week in February, the bout to be staged in Miami, where Brown is a popular box-office favorite.

Promoter Goldie Ahearn meanwhile has contacted Conn's manager, Johnny Ray, who is now on the coast vacationing with his fighter, who just successfully defended his title in New York against Gus Lesnovich. The local promoter has guaranteed Ray $7,500 to show his fighter here next summer against Overlin in a title fight.

Two Sesamoid Bone Injuries Are Suffered

Breaks Come During Drill for $100,000 Race; Trainer Weeps

By the Associated Press

Arcadia, Calif., Dec. 1.—El Chico, champion 2-year-old in 1938, was destroyed tonight to end his suffering after he had broken two sesamoid bones in his left foreleg while in training for the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap next year.

The champion was destroyed by injection of strychnine under supervision of the attending veterinarians, L. J. Cook and J. E. Peters.

The injury, similar to that suffered by Charles S. Howard's Sorteado recently, cut short the promising career of the William Zeigler, jr., Stables' chief hope for the Santa Anita Handicap.

Trainer Mat Brady, who was attempting to bring El Chico back to his old form when he won $84,100, said the horse was destroyed with Zeigler's permission, wired from New York.

Chico had been in intense pain since pulling up short in a 3-furlong gallop this morning. His foreleg was X-rayed immediately.

Brady, in tears after the accident, said at first he hoped the horse might be saved for stud, although its injury was of the same nature which caused Sorteado's destruction.

"We were just bringing El Chico back into the form he showed as a youngster," he said, "and were pointing him for the handicap."

The horse, which won seven times in as many starts as a 2-year-old, was something of a disappointment the next year.

Although El Chico was insured with Lloyd's of London for $100,000 while the juvenile champ, the present value of the policy, was not known, but was believed to be greatly reduced.

Pastor and Hartnek Matched for Fight

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—Jimmy Johnston, manager of Heavyweight Bob Pastor, announced tonight his fighter has signed to meet Paul Hartnek, of Minneapolis, in a ten-round bout in Omaha, January 26.

Pastor is in training now to take on Buddy Scott in Dallas, December 15, in his first fight since his 11-round knockout by Joe Louis in Detroit in September.

Danny Petro Tames A.A.U. Fistic Title

Danny Petro, curly haired young southpaw, brought the first senior championship of the eleventh annual District A. A. U. boxing tournament to Southeast Washington last night, defeating George De Zerne in the finals of the 112-pound class at Turner's Arena.

Only one knockout was recorded as the rest of the field pawed past the quarter-final stage of the tournament, Carl Ercoli, unattached, putting the chill on Lew De Vore, National Guard, after 50 seconds of the third round of their 160-pound bout.

Roundhouse Lefts

Petro took command in the first round, forcing De Zerne into a defensive crouch with a fusilade of authoritative roundhouse lefts. He staggered his opponent in the second with a looping left and had him hanging on at the finish.

Kenny Swann's 135-pound bout with Ray Landis was up to advance notices. Landis started fast, faded a bit in the second round, and then came fast in the last, but his letdown was enough to lose the decision. Swann took the lead in the second with well-timed rights and just lasted through the final round. Landis caught him with a hard right that shook him up and almost put him out.

Al Pavone, St. Mary's novice 126-pounder, survived a first-round knockdown to take a close decision over Bill Scott, of Police Boys Club No. 5. Pavone took Scott's hardest shots in the second round without visible effect, and finished strong to win a unanimous decision.

Cook Is Winner

Burro to Assist Army Mule Against Navy Mascots Today

Service Schools Now Have Two Pets Apiece for Hexing 'Battle Royal'

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Dec. 1.—It appeared today that outcome of the Army-Navy football battle tomorrow will depend on a paraphrase of that old military maxim: "Git tha'r fustest with the mostest mascots."

The Navy varsity, hunting a dependable nex for the Cadet legions, this week enlisted Melissa, the tough little schnauzer mascot of the undefeated "B" squad, as assistant to Bill VIII, traditional Navy goat.

But today the Navy intelligence service reported that the West Pointers are taking no chances on being outnumbered in mascot shock troops—the Greylegs have added a spare mascot to match Melissa.

The Army advised the Naval Academy that Poncho, a little Ecuadorean burro, had been mustered into the service as aide-de-camp to Mr. Jackson, the old Army mule.

Mascoting, like soldiering or sailoring, needs extended training, and the Middies would bet Poncho shows more left feet in the hexing business than the dumbest rookie in the awkward squad.

They also pointed out that M'liss and Bill had got there "firstest." The Navy mascots went to Philadelphia last night with the team, but Army's four-footed wizards will travel with the corps tomorrow.

With the team already on the battle site, the Naval Academy was comparatively quiet today after last night's salvo of enthusiasm at the three-bonfire pep rally.

The midshipmen will entrain at 8:10 a. m. for Philadelphia. Special trains for civilians and officers will leave soon after.

Crabtown will be a deserted village until the Navy team comes back—with a victory safely stowed in the duffle-bag, as any native will declare, with or without provocation.

Picard-Nelson 'Row' to Be Settled

Right to 'Outstanding Pro Golfer' Title to Be Decided at Miami

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Dec. 1.—Some say Henry Picard, the P. G. A. champion, is the year's outstanding professional golfer. Others say it's Byron Nelson, the National Open titleholder.

The argument should be settled here December 14-17 when Picard and Nelson get together with a couple hundred playmates in the $10,000 Miami Open tournament, the last of the 1939 campaign.

Picard, the stylist from Hershey, Pa., was a slight edge in the friendly feud for the Vardon trophy, emblematic of professional supremacy. Picard not only holds a 459-454 edge in points but is the year's leading money winner with $10,202 to Nelson's $8,386.

So there will be more at stake that the $2,500 top prize when the field swings away on the first lap of the 72-hole tournament.

The rest of the boys, however, are by no means conceding this tournament either to Picard or Nelson. Ralph Guldahl, always well regarded, could pass Picard's earnings for the year by adding the first prize to the $9,377 he already has collected. Dick Metz has picked up $3,600 and will be among the favorites, as will Sam Snead and Harold (Jug) McSpaden.

HENRY PICARD

Cream of Golf Pro Field to Compete in $10,000 Tournament

McSpaden won the tournament last year with a 275, beating Picard by a stroke. The year before Snead set a tournament record with a 267, 13 strokes under par. Slammin' Sam, top money winner last year, now is in fifth place with $7,212.

The Miami Open was founded in the boom days of 1925 when a group of civic boosters posted $5,000 to put the city on the winter golfing map. Abe Mitchell, the English pro, won the inaugural and Willie Klein captured the 1926 renewal. Then Gene Sarazen won the tournament four straight years.

Just when the golfers were ready to change the name to the "Sarazen Open," Joe Turnesa broke Gene's string in 1931. Tommy Armour won in 1932 and again in 1933. Klein repeated in 1936. Johnny Revolta skyrocketed to fame by winning in 1933. Ralph Stonehouse and Ray Mangum accounted for the other renewals.

Hoya Cagers Launch Season Against Baltimore U. Tonight

Pajac, Rizzi, Schmitt To Be Supported by Giebel, Dieckelman; Ripley in 2nd Year

Georgetown University's basketball team, forced to rebuild virtually from the ground up, tonight opens its 1939-40 season when it opposes the University of Baltimore in Baltimore at 9:15 o'clock.

The Hoyas tonight will return only three letter men in George Briac, forward, and Irving Rizzi and Capt. John Schmitt, guards. Players lost by graduation are: Joe Murphy, Ed Kurtyka and Jack Riches, forwards, while Johnny McGowan, center, has withdrawn from school.

Fourteen players are to accompany the Hoyas to Baltimore tonight. They are: Pajac, Dickelman, Giebel, Schmitt, Rizzi, O'Grady, Miller, Lujack, Kiernan, Martin, McKay, Routh, Prial and Scheid.

Probable Starters

Giebel, formerly an All District scholastic at St. John's High School, is one of the outstanding sophomores on the squad and is Coach Elmer Ripley's current choice to succeed McGowan.

In the first season of his second term at Georgetown Ripley last season turned out one of the finest teams in the school's history, a team that tied for the Eastern Intercollegiate Basketball League's championship.

Petey Scalzo Kayoes Stolz in Round 4

By the United Press

New York, Dec. 1.—Petey Scalzo, New York, the United States outstanding featherweight challenger, tagged Young Allie Stolz, of Newark, with his first knockout tonight in the fourth round at Madison Square Garden.

More than 8,000 fans saw square-shouldered, dark-haired Scalzo floor his Rangier opponent with a smashing left hook to the chin for the count of seven. Brown-haired Allie rose gamely, but wobbly and was immediately felled in his own corner with a straight right to the button. He held the rope, while on one knee, and then fell over onto the canvas.

Referee Arthur Donovan halted the bout at the count of nine, giving Scalzo victory on a technical kayo at 2:33 of the fourth round. Donovan's intervention was unnecessary, because the prone Newark youngster was unable to rise.

Tonight's victory advanced Scalzo's campaign for the featherweight title, giving him a return shot at Simon Chavez, of Venezuela, who won a questionable decision over Petey in Venezuela in September. They will stage their return go at the Garden on December 22, and the winner is virtually assured of a title shot at Champion Joey Archibald, whom both Scalzo and Chavez have beaten in nontitle bouts.

I. D. R. A. Indians Lose Again, 25-18

It's second disastrous start in succession was made last night by the Indian quintet of the Interior Department Recreation Association Basketball League, the 1938 champions being turned back by PWA, 25-18, in one-half of a double-header at the Interior gym.

Four points was the best individual effort any of the First Americans could register, while three PWA sharpshooters were responsible for six points apiece. Kleiman, Hobson and Wright were the stars for the winners.

In the only other game of the night, United States Housing five kept its undefeated status intact with a 41-19 victory over Miscellaneous Service. Frye's 16 points led the attack.

Speed, Accuracy Keynote of G. U.'s Line-up for Court Debut

The regular Georgetown University basketball team which will open its season at Baltimore University tonight packs little height but plenty of speed and shooting acuracy. Tallest member of the starting line-up is 6-foot-2 Jimmy Giebel, former all-prep center at St. John's College High School. The starters (left to right, below) are George Pajak, forward, and Capt. Jimmy Schmitt, guard; Irving Rizzi, forward, and Dick Dieckelmann, guard, and Giebel, center. Left—Three sophomores of whom Coach Elmer Ripley expects big things. They are (left to right) Al Lujack, Russ Miller and Buddy O'Grady

Quiet! The Durocher-MacPhail Tableau Is About to Go on Air!

By the United Press.

Cincinnati, Dec. 1.—The two most loquacious individuals in major league baseball, Laughing Larry MacPhail and Lippy Leo Durocher, will get together here tomorrow on a little matter of the Brooklyn managerial contract after avoiding each other since the World Series.

Durocher, who'll play the role of the irresistible force in tomorrow's tableau, and MacPhail, who'll essay the part of the immovable object, probably will put on the best show of the winter major league meetings to be held here next week.

Durocher, who did one of the year's best jobs in piloting Brooklyn into third place in the National League race, wants a two-year contract to manage the Dodgers in 1940 and 1941.

MacPhail is determined Durocher won't get more than a one-year contract, believing that no manager is entitled to a longer term. Never in MacPhail's baseball career has he given a pilot more than a one-year contract and those close to MacPhail are making him an 8-5 favorite over Durocher to uphold his baseball tenet.

Chuck Dressen, now a coach under Durocher, did an outstanding job with the Cincinnati Reds in 1935, when MacPhail was general manager of that club and failed to get a two-year document out of laughing Larry.

Money isn't the big issue at stake in this stalemate. Durocher and MacPhail can get together in 10 minutes on salary. But those close to MacPhail believe his ace in the hole will be to wear down Durocher by roundabout arguments and then deal the master stroke by offering him a fancier salary than he expects.

years in grade school, four years in high school, at Toledo and Detroit, and four years at the University of Detroit, under Gus Dorais. Washington got him through Dorais—who recommended him to another pupil, Ray Flaherty, who coaches Washington. Nine other pro teams passed him up in the draft.

"I've been lucky this year," he told us. "Heck, on some of those touchdown runs I could've walked home—what with fellows like Pinckert, Edwards and so on blocking for me. But I don't remember the good days, like I had against Brooklyn. I remember the bad ones. I looked terrible against a couple teams. Terrible, gee, I'd hate to have this be my last year as a pro, and not have another chance to try to make that up."

Among some of Farkas' "terrible" performances were several returns of kickoffs for touchdowns, a record-setting 97-yard run after taking an end zone pass from Frank Filchock, a few 80-yard jaunts through tackle, and countless sweeps around end.

Old Folks Responsible for Spirit

We asked him how it was that, after 14 years of it, he still played like an excited high school kid.

"I guess I can thank my father and mother for that," he said. "You see they're from the old country, and while they're interested in what I do they still don't know much about football. My old man saw me play 20 minutes against a high school team—one year when I was the leading high school scorer in the city—and I ran for four touchdowns. I guess I was pretty proud, for I waited for him after the game to hear his compliments.

"Well, he finally came up to me. He was on crutches then, and I thought he was going to hit me with one of them. He was as sore as a boil. I asked him what was the matter with him, and he said to me, 'You could've run for another one of those things if you hadn't loafed.'

"Another time, and this is only a year or so ago, I was driving my mother home one day and I happened to have a football with me. It was on the seat between us, and kind of uncomfortable, so I asked mom to hold it. Well, she held it on her lap for a long time, then she looked down at it and said, 'What on earth is this thing, son?'"

Farkas is getting married at the end of the season. He wants to go to California on his honeymoon, and has figured out that if the Redskins win the pennant and the play-off, George Marshall will pay his way out there, to play in the annual pro game on the Coast.

Rams Favored Over Violets

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—The battle of the Bronx will be at stake tomorrow when twice-beaten Fordham and New York University, defeated in three engagements, wind up their football seasons before some 70,000 in the Yankee Stadium.

Fordham, whipped only by Tulane and Alabama in early season games, is favored to win its fifteenth game in the series which stretches back to 1889. N. Y. U., turned back by North Carolina, Missouri and Georgetown, has won only four of the series and tied one.

The last time N. Y. U. came through was 7-6 in 1936 after the Rams had won seven straight. The last two years the Rams won much as they pleased, 20-7 in 1937 and 25-0 last year.

The Violets will depend much on the throwing arm of big Ed Boell while the Rams have a varied offense built around the brilliant Dom Principe and Len Eshmont, running and passing behind a powerful line, headed by Center Lou Defilippo.

Probable line-ups:

N. Y. U.	Position.	Fordham.
Schilling	L.E.	Denneny
Petereit	L.T.	Ruzman

that as a result of special pointing during the last week the squad is ready to uncover its best football of the year. The starting backfield of Monty Whitehead, Ed Gillette, Ed Malcolm and big Cliff Lenz looms capable of delivering powerful driving attack against the Cadets, and Navy plans to strike quickly, get an early score and then protect the lead.

Another element that enters into Navy's improved condition is the bolstering of the defense against passing, hitherto a decided weakness. This was accomplished through placing John Gutting, center of the basketball team, in the backfield. Gutting, who stands 6 feet 3, showed to advantage when substituted in the Princeton game, and it is felt he will take care of the heaves of Johnny Hatch, Army ace.

ing for the Canadians at 5:47 of the opening period when he backhanded a short, low shot through Lee, who, at the time, was looking in another direction. Lee apparently thought that his defense man, Ross (Nip) Knipfel, had stopped the Canadians' rush by intercepting a pass. But just as Lee looked away, George Robinson cleverly stole the rubber from Knipfel and skidded a neat pass to Imlach, who stood close at one side of the net.

The Canadians ran their advantage to 2-0 when O'Flaherty and Bob Laurent collaborated in setting up an easy shot for Imlach, who set the red light blinking at 16:50.

Thoroughly outclassed all through the first period when the play was almost exclusively inside their red line, the Eagles bounced back strongly after intermission and picked up their only score, while Jack Draper, ace visiting defenseman, languished in the penalty box for holding Bill Davies, of the Eagles.

As if in retaliation for the treatment he received from Draper, Davies was quick to slip in the point, on a rebound from an unsuccessful shot by Alan Kuntz. Center Roy Covert set up the score by crashing through the Canadians' defense, and passing to Kuntz.

The remainder of the period was rougher than a barroom brawl. At one time each team was operating with only four players, as two of their number cooled heels and tempers in the penalty box.

The Cannadians, apparently much fresher than their younger and greatly outweighed opponents, completely dominated the third and final 20-minute period. They extended their lead to 3 to 1 on a penalty shot by Draper, who was given the chance when the referee ruled Mike Germann, of the Eagles, hap tripped him on a scoring onslaught, and finished off with a fifth point, by Inglis.

Inglis tallied on a spectacular individual sally, in which he outsmarted Davies and Goalie Lee. At the time the Canadians were shy a defenseman, King, who had drawn a 2-minute banishment for checking Knipfel into the boards. Knipfel, after colliding with the charging King, bumped Referee Bill Chadwick over the boards and into the aisle.

The Canadians continue their Eastern trip tonight, meeting the Sea Gulls at Atlantic City and finish up the invasion against the Rovers in New York tomorrow afternoon. Because they play each of the five Eastern amateur sixes, all the games count in the Eastern League standings.

Rovers Beat Gulls, 5-4, Boost League Lead

Atlantic City, N. J., Dec. 1 (AP).—The New York Rovers increased their lead in the Eastern Amateur Ice Hockey League tonight by edging out the Atlantic City Sea Gulls, 5 to 4.

Len Loree, husky defenseman of the Rovers, registered the winning point in a closely fought contest when he scored an unassisted goal in 11:55 of the final period.

Mackenzie Reviews Top Feuds Of Pre-Modern Ice Hockey Era

Eagles' Coach Tells of Type of Game Played Before 1912 and How Players Handled Puck

This is the sixth of a series on ice hockey by Redvers (Red) Mackenzie, coach of the Washington Eagles and former Canadian golf professional and newspaperman. Other articles will follow from time to time.

By Redvers (Red) Mackenzie.

Ice hockey before 1912 was different. Goals were scored largely by individual effort and there was not the coordinated attack and planned plays such as we have them today. The great players I have mentioned in previous articles were free to ramble along and were given free scope in the display of their remarkable talents. The forwards were not expected to backcheck because there were seven men on the ice for each team and at least four defenders to take came of the other team's attack. The defense men lined up in single file and were called "cover point" and "point." The "rover" roamed around at will and was usually on hand to help protect his net and to act as a scoring threat as well.

MACKENZIE

When the game began to be played on a six-man basis it started to change and the first team to settle down to a backchecking system was the old Quebec Bulldogs. Paddy Moran was in goal, the 260-pound Harry Mummery was a solid defense man, as was Goldie Prodgers and Joe Hall. Joe Malone, one of the game's most amazing sharpshooters, and Tommy Smith, the weazel, were the centers and high scorers; at different times each led the league in scoring. Jack Marks, Jack McDonald, Rusty Crawford were other forwards. I'll never forget the way the forwards used to stop dead in their tracks when they'd lose the puck and as one man skate like fiends to cover the return attack. Leeches were as lazy as butterflies compared to these lads, and they turned the other teams on their collective ears for a few years until the new vogue became general.

Flying Frenchmen

The Flying Frenchmen, Les Canadiens of Montreal, entered the National League about this time and their terrific skating endeared them to their followers, who still are the most rabid fans in the world. Jack Laviolette, who had his leg cut off only to turn into a motorcycle rider; Didier Pitre, who smashed the end boards with his cannonading shots; Newsy (The Fox) Lalonde, the shiftiest and trickiest center of his day; Georges Vezina, the Chicoutimic Cucumber and the coolest and steadiest goaler of that era, were the best known players. This club carries on to this day and for years was the best drawing card in the league. More about that later.

Ottawa is the capital of Canada and has produced more great hockey players than any other spot above the border to the north. Following the Silver Seven the club became known as the Senators and it was about this time that I joined the staff of the Montreal Star as a columnist in charge of golf news. At the end of the golf season I was put on hockey writing which kept me busy five nights per week. You're right, on the sixth night I invariably found my way to a rink to see another hockey match.

Rowdyism Rampant

Covering all home games for Les Canadiens and also traveling to Ottawa to cover the games played at the capital. They were bloody battles, too. The game had not quite reached its present lofty spot in the established sports of the continent and rowdyism, fights and gore walked arm in arm through the games. Feuds broke out all along the line and I can well remember a few of them. The Joe Hall-Newsy Lalonde; Minnie McGiffen-Cully Wilson-Sprague Cleghorn vs. everybody. The Hall-Lalonde duo took turns at breaking each other's noses, legs or arms while Cleghorn was the villain of the entire league and the real "bad man" of hockey; also one of the very greatest defenders who ever took a piece of hockey hickory in his hand. How well I remember the night in Montreal when Ottawa played the first of a home and home series for the league championship. Cleghorn and Bill Cotu played defense for Les Canadiens in the first game—they never got to the second because the league president suspended them both for the deliberate fouling of two Ottawa players. Fred Hitchman was fresh out of a Royal Canadian Mounted Police barracks. Big, raw-boned and tough. "The Hitch" cared little for Cleghorn's reputation and proved it by dumping Sprague to the ice a few times and then laughing at him. Toward the end of the match Hitchman carried the puck along the boards and Cleghorn met him with a terrific bodycheck into the boards and a rasping cross-check with his stick which opened Hitchman's skull. The big boy skated off under his own steam with another smile at Cleghorn and a few years later teamed on the Boston Bruin defense with Sprague and became, largely under the Cleghorn guidance, to be the hardest man to pass in the N. H. L. and later paired with Eddie Shore to be the greatest defensive unit and all-star winners at their particular positions.

In the same game, Coutu hammered Cy Dennenny over the back of the head with his stick and laid that worthy cold behind the Canadian net but not until Cy had buried the puck in the net for the series winning marker. The Canadiens went to Ottawa with their regular defense absent and with a two-goal deficit. I 'covered' the game for the Montreal Star and saw the most remarkable exhibition of goaltending that I have ever seen. The late George Vezina stood in front of the Canadien net and stopped 39 shots in the first period from the greatest snipers in the game. The ordinary goaler does not have nearly that number of shots in an entire game. The Senators failed to score and as the game wore on the Canadien forwards grew confident and managed to tie the serie with two goals of their own. However, Dennenny, league-leading scorer, his head swathed in bandages, managed to whistle one of his famous hooked drives past Vezina in the last five minutes and thus sent his team to the Pacific Coast, where they won the world's championship. Vezina stopped 65 shots in that game which undoubtedly was the classiest goaltending exhibition of all time.

Old Rivalries Feature Grid Program Today

Service Game Tops List but Others Hold Much Interest

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 1.—The Army-Navy battle at Philadelphia heads a slim list of traditional encounters, intersectional contests and just plain football games which virtually winds up the 1940 college gridiron season tomorrow.

Army and Navy, despite spotty records, will draw 102,000 fans, lured as much by the pageantry accompanying the game as the game itself.

That contest holds the national spotlight, but local rivalries flare on many fronts, bringing together neighboring teams in games in which past performance is tossed out the window and an underdog is as likely as not to push a favored rival all over the field.

These games include the N. Y. U.-Fordham meeting, expected to draw 70,000 fans; Boston College and Holy Cross, with an attendance of 40,000 in prospect; St. Louis and Washington University; Tulane and L. S. U., a magnet for 50,000 fans; Georgia and Georgia Tech, and Southern Methodist and Texas Christian.

Topping the intersectional program is the Stanford-Dartmouth encounter in New York, bringing together teams which will be winding up seasons with championship dreams long since forgotten.

Two undefeated teams go into action, both risking possible, or even probable, bowl bids. The Southern California powerhouse meets Washington, always a tough foe for the Trojans, in a game expected to draw 50,000 at Los Angeles, and unbeaten Duquesne tackles a rugged Detroit eleven at Pittsburgh.

Relief Is Denied Three Ball Players

Baltimore, Dec. 1 (AP).—Chairman William Milnes Maloy of Maryland unemployment compensation board disclosed today the board had declined benefit applications of three players on the Baltimore International League Baseball Club.

Maloy said all three were residents of other States and applied almost as soon as the baseball season ended. Other players planned to file similar claims if the first three were successful, the chairman added. Their names were not made public.

The board ruled the players were, under terms of their contracts, hired for the full year, although they drew pay only during the playing season.

Threats of Rain Enhance Bulldogs' Chances in Atlanta

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Dec. 1.—The Ramblin' Wreck of Georgia Tech, enjoying its most profitable football season since a great 1928 team was acclaimed national champion, steps right smack into a gang of Georgia Bulldogs tomorrow and an expected lot of trouble.

Records mean little when these two teams get together for their annual neighborhood battle. Often in this bitter rivalry that began in 1893 the favored team has taken it on the chin.

A sell-out crowd of close to 30,000 was expected.

Texas Tech Beats Loyola Eleven, 13-0 Aided by Fumbles

New Orleans, Dec. 1 (U.P.).—Loyola University of the South's football team went down, 13-0, tonight before the power of Texas Tech.

The Texans capitalized on two Loyola breaks. After Loyola fumbled on its own 6-yard line in the second period, Tech Quarterback Charles Calhoun scored on an off-tackle play.

Tech blocked a Loyola punt in the fourth period and recovered to pave the way for its last score. Halfback Charles Storrs made the touchdown.

Clyde Tolson Scores Third Victory in Row at Bowie

Late Effort Nets Victory Over Beauzar

Gen'l Manager Is Beaten in Photo Finish; Victor Pays Backers $12.50

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., Dec. 1.—When the old-timers bring up horses like Sea Sand, Mowlee and others who favor this Price Georges County track, we can tell them about Clyde Tolson, a 2-year-old son of Carlaris. The young gelding, which runs in the interest of E. K. Bryson, today won his third consecutive purse of the meeting in the Marlboro, a test of a mile and 70 yards. Under good handling by Jockey Al Schmidl, Clyde Tolson finished a neck in front of a photo finish for second money in which the camera voted for M. B. Goff's Beauzar over Mrs. E. G. Lewis' Gen'l Manager.

The defeat of Gen'l Manager was a bitter pill for the favorite players to swallow. This Morvich colt was second in the Endurance Handicap, closing like a house afire to lose by a scant nose after running to the outside fence entering the stretch. Today he failed to run out. In fact, he failed to run up to expectations, leaving the majority in the crowd of 9,000 holding worthless pasteboard.

Clyde Tolson, the $2 bettors' horse in the field, paid a $12.50 mutuel and was clocked in the ordinary time of 1:46 4-5. The race was over a fast track and under low, sagging skies, which obligingly held their moisture up to the feature event.

True Star was first to show in front when Starter Jim Milton sent the field out of the Puett gate. Gen'l Manager and Clyde Tolson followed with Beauzar fourth. Approaching the far turn Gen'l Manager got his head in front but not for long. Clyde Tolson supplanted him as the pacemaker and some hard driving by all hands resulted. In midstretch, Sun Altesse came up to join the battle. However, approaching the wire, Clyde Tolson drew out. Then Beauzar on the outside rallied and closed with a rush that would have given him all the money in a couple of jumps.

Pep Young Says His Leg Is Okay

Pittsburgh, Dec. 1 (AP).—Floyd (Pep) Young today eased Manager Frankie Frisch's worries about a second baseman for the Pirates in the 1940 campaign.

Writing from his home at Jamestown, N. C., Young declared himself recovered from a leg injury which caused him to miss 70 games last season. His doctor reported no big leaguer would be in better shape than Young for spring training.

Failure of the Bucs to finish in the first division was attributed largely to the absence of Young after he was hurt at Brooklyn on May 2.

Another North Carolina Pirate reporting himself in good shape again was Pitcher Mace Brown, who was put out of commission during the latter part of last season by an attack of grippe.

Standard Gas Asks Crowley To Head Board

FDIC Chairman Is Considering Offer From Billion-Dollar Utility

By the Associated Press

Leo T. Crowley, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, said yesterday that he had been offered the chairmanship of the Standard Gas and Electric Co., a billion dollar utility holding company.

Crowley said he had not decided to accept, and would not comment further on it until he talks with President Roosevelt, probably early next week.

Standard Gas and Electric, with headquarters in Chicago, controls utility systems in 20 States and Mexico.

Crowley, 50, and a resident of Madison, Wis., has been chairman of the FDIC since February 15, 1934, shortly after the corporation's formation.

As the $10,000-a-year head of this Federal agency, he has been the chief guarantor of approximately $60,000,000,000 that Americans have deposited in their banks.

If Crowley accepts the utility job, and the President does not name a successor immediately, the law provides that Preston Delano, comptroller of the currency, will become ex-officio chairman until a sucessor is named.

Standard Gas Statement

In New York, Victor Emanuel, chairman of the board of Standard Gas, issued the following statement:

"The board of directors of Standard Gas and Electric Co. has conferred with Leo T. Crowley, now chairman of the FDIC, and has asked him to accept a place on the board of directors of the company made vacant by the recent death of Benjamin L. Allen, a director.

"It is contemplated that if Mr. Crowley accepts this place on the board of directors he will become chairman of the board and Mr. Emanuel will become chairman of the finance committee. No other changes in the board of directors or the company's executive officers are contemplated.

"Mr. Crowley has taken the tender under consideration. B. W. Lynch continues as president."

Credit Corp. Extends Loans on 1939 Wheat

The Commodity Credit Corporation announced yesterday an extension of grower loans on 1939 wheat stored in commercial elevators and warehouses, under which the obligations will not become due until April 30, 1940. Originally, such loans were to mature seven months after being made. The maturity date on some was as early as February, 1940.

As originally stipulated, loans on wheat stored on farms will mature April 30, 1940, but the corporation said it was probable that borrowers would be given an opportunity to extend their loans another year in areas in which farm-stored wheat, in good condition, might be carried through summer months without the risk of loss from insect infestation.

Realty Bonds Gain 1.9% More During Month

Boston Issues Lead Advance With Rise of 8.1% in November

New York, Dec. 1.—Real estate bond prices made an average increase of 1.9 per cent in November, according to the Amott-Baker price averages. This gain follows an increase of 1.6 per cent during October. The average price of a $1,000 real estate bond on the basis of the 200 issues used in the computation is now $316. This average stood at $310 per $1,000 on October 31 and $305 on September 30.

Boston issues lead the way with an increase of 8.1 per cent to an average price of $428 per $1,000 bond. These Boston issues also lead for the first 11 months, being 11.2 per cent over the $385 figure established on December 31, 1938. During November New York issues rose 2.2 per cent and Pittsburgh issues increased 1.4 per cent. Buffalo and Philadelphia issues registered respective declines of 6.7 per cent and 0.7 per cent.

Steady Improvement.

An analysis of the changes in the different issues shows that the real estate bond picture has been improving since August. In August 29 issues increased in price, in September 39 issues registered increases, in October 84 issues increased and during the past 30 days 94 issues increased.

In a breakdown of the figures by type of property, all divisions showed advances in the 30 days just ended. Housekeeping apartment issues led the way with a rise of 2.6 per cent, office building issues rose 2 per cent, theater properties increased 1.1 per cent, apartment hotel issues rose 0.8 per cent and hotels rose 0.3 per cent. The situation for the 11 months is somewhat different since only housekeeping apartments and theater issues are now above the 1938 closing prices. However, as the figures above indicate, the situation is improving since a month ago only one category, the theater group, was ahead of the 1938 close.

Bankers Consider Buying U. S. Stocks Owned Abroad

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—International banking interests are considering the formation of a billion dollar company to absorb foreign holdings of American securities earmarked for sale, the Wall Street Journal says today.

Those concerned, it said, believe that an organization of this type set up in one of the British possessions could divert the stream of foreign selling and thus relieve the stock market of disturbing pressure.

The proposed company, with American representation on the board of directors, would be authorized to issue in the United States about $1,000,000,000 of debentures for public sale bearing an interest rate of between 3 and 3½ per cent. Interests sponsoring the plan were not indentified.

Formation of a Canadian company to buy the foreign owned securities, the newspaper said, would assure freedom from the application of the Johnson act which prohibits United States loans to foreign countries in default of their obligations to the United States.

Wall Street reports since the outbreak of the war have indicated a considerable and steady volume of selling of securities for foreign account.

Chrysler Votes $1 a Share for Third Quarter

But Payment Does Not Reflect Losses Due To Strike Just Ended

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—The Chrysler Corporation, with all quiet on its labor front, turned to its stockholders today with a dividend of $1 a share on the common stock. The payment, to be made December 23 to holders of record December 9, makes a total of $5 a share paid this year. Payments in 1938 amounted to $2 a share.

These were the shares which, in the 56 days during which the automobile manufacturing plants were shut down, slipped $10 in their market quotations—from a high of $94.37 early in October to $84.25 the day before the Chrysler employes went back to work.

The present dividend came as the result of operations in the three months ended September 30, just before the labor trouble began, and, consequently, does not reflect the several millions of dollars in losses which the shut-down was estimated to have cost the company.

September quarter net profit was indicated to be $6,057,347, or $1.39 a common share, compared with $962,279, or 22 cents a share, in the like 1938 period and $13,701,481, or $3.15 a share, in the June, 1939, quarter. Net profit for the first nine months of this year was $31,403,118, or $7.22 a share, compared with $6,671,878, or $1.53 a share in the like 1938 period.

Montgomery Ward $1 Extra

Directors of Montgomery Ward & Co. today declared an extra dividend of $1 a share on the common stock as well as the regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents, both payable January 15 to stock of record December 13. Glenn L. Martin Initial $1

Directors of Glenn L. Martin Co. today declared an initial dividend of $1 a share on common stock, payable December 21 to holders of record December 11. At the meeting President Martin said: "It is indeed gratifying to inaugurate the payment of a dividend at the conclusion of the most successful year in the corporation history, and we are looking forward to 1940 with confidence that it will be a still greater year."

Deliveries for the first 11 months of 1939 approximated $20,110,823, Mr. Martin declared. With total deliveries of more than $24,500,000 indicated for the year the Martin plant is running 24 hours a day with 13,000 employes.

Melville Shoe Year-End 75 Cents

Melville Shoe Corporation directors authorized a final dividend for the year of 75 cents a share on common stock, payable December 27 to holders of record December 14. This will boost total 1939 payments to $4 a share, against $3 last year. Company sells shoes at retail throughout the country.

National Steel 50 Cents

A dividend of 50 cents a share was ordered by the National Steel Corporation payable December 21 to holders of record December 11. The company paid 40 cents in September.

Houdaille Hershey Class B 50 Cents

Directors of Houdaille Hershey Corporation, makers of automobile equipment, today declared a year-end dividend of 50 cents a share on Class B stock, payable December 21 to holders of record December 15. Rally Results From Oversold Position; Low-Priced Issues Attract Buyers; Bond Changes Narrow and Irregular

New York, Dec. 1.—Extension of the war by the Red invasion of Finland may have accounted for a ragged rally in stocks today. It seemed more logical, however, to explain the shift in trend as correction of the oversold position in some groups, some new buying in low-priced issues, and the return to Wall Street of traders and brokers who celebrated the November 30 Thanksgiving.

Steels made the only decisive advances although motors, bluechip manufacturing and rail equipment shares were generally higher. Oils, utilities, stores, foods and carrier descriptions lagged. The independent aircraft section spurted on bullish announcements of orders and profits from several companies and the Glenn L. Martin dividend declaration.

Commodity transactions were of some aid to share markets, wheat selling at a 2-year high with gains ranging from ⅞ to 1⅛ cents. Buying for export and further forecasts of reduced yields for 1940 were the influences. Even if the vast armies on the Western Front are economizing on munitions, they will have to be fed through the winter. Cotton gained 9 to 14 points. December going above 10 cents.

Low-Priced Shares Favorites

Preference of traders for stocks in the low-priced brackets was noticeable from the start. Of the day's fifteen most active issues, ten were selling under 20, seven under 10.

Motors responded but mildly to the sharpupturn in assemblies reported by Ward's which reflected the snap-back in activity following the "Roosevelt" Thanksgiving. Resumption of the Chrysler plants following the strike, will give further impetus to motor car output in the current week. The Chrysler report and dividend, announced after the close, will be discounted in tomorrow's market.

There were some wide swings in several special issues. Outlet Co. preferred spurted 5½ points, to a new high, at 120, and Pittsburgh Steel preferred B was down 6. Gains of 3 points or more occurred in Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit preferred, duPont and International Silver preferred. Mesta Machine, Norfolk & Western and George Helme advanced 2 or more.

Foreign Holdings

Whether or not European interests are sellers in United States securities markets continued to excite discussion and argument. Realists pointed out that the action of sterling and exchanges tied to sterling since the war started could have discouraged investment of funds from abroad and even encouraged liquidation. Even in cases where more pounds were required for original purchases made prior to September 1, amounts realized in depreciated sterling would produce more pounds for the British or French seller.

For this same reason—the low level of sterling and sterling-bloc currencies, it was emphasized, large-scale buying of American commodities by the belligerents is under a handicap. Taking into account the drop in the pound and the recent rise in United States commodities, such as wheat, British buyers would be paying 35 per cent or more for deliveries than three months ago. This would explain the drive by the Allies to buy in countries—including the British Empire countries—where the pound has higher value.

Canadian Purchases Here

It also explains why Canadian purchases in the United States, aside from warplanes, have been on the downgrade and why Canadian goods are being shipped in larger amounts to this country. Analysts who are insisting on a conservative estimate of possibilities for outside trade, also emphasize that shifts in supply sources from Germany, France, England and other European countries to the United States as a result of the war, including chemicals, metals and even toys, can only be temporary because the United States is a much higher cost producer than any of the nations concerned. End of the war, it is assumed, would be followed by an intensified competition in world trade which this country can only meet by matching prices as well as quality.

Bond Market Quiet

Listed bonds were quiet and irregular today, high grade investment issues tending to drift lower, while speculative bonds followed the upward course taken by the equities section. A few of the cheap and more volatile bonds were in fair demand. But business in general was dull, with turnover only $6,070,000. In the foreign section Finnish bonds reflected the sad developments of northern Europe, but Scandinavians were better. Most other foreigns were quiet and soft.

United States Treasury securities were idle on the big board, but active over the counter. Short-term issues held their ground, while longer datings dipped after early firmness. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations also receded. Among best-rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds the tone was easy, for investment operations were all but suspended pending the appearance next week of a number of fresh loans.

Some of the speculative carrier bonds were marked higher, B. & O. issues showing unusual strength. Holding company and share-privilege issues did well, owing to the rally in related equities.

Finland 6s, traded for the first time since Wednesday, dropped nearly 16 points, while Helsingfors 6½s fell another 4 points on top of their previous decline. Norwegian and Danish bonds rallied sharply, but Belgians were irregular. Belligerent bonds drifted lower, with Australians weaker than others. Latin-American default issues were soft, for the intimations of a new plan to settle the Colombian default failed to impress the market.

December Wheat Climbs to Peak For Two Years

Chicago, Dec. 1 (AP).—Prices of wheat deliverable here this month reached the best levels since December, 1937, in the futures pit and March, 1938, in the spot market today.

Wheat deliverable in May or July, however, could not hold early fractional gains, with profit taking and selling inspired by light rains in the Southwest unsettling the market.

December wheat, after a quick runup in late dealings, closed at the day's best level, ⅞ to ⅛ higher than yesterday, at 92⅝ to 92¾, compared with 63 a year ago. May and July were ¼ lower to ⅜ higher, 89⅛ to 89¼ and 86⅜ to 86½, respectively. They had been as much as ⅝-cent higher and ½-cent lower at various times during the session.

Federal Life Annuity Plan Called Bad

D. C. Insurance Expert Assails Proposal of Senator Wagner

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Criticism of the Federal annuity plan came from headquarters of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association yesterday. The proposal made recently by Senator Robert A. Wagner that the Government sell annuities through post offices "at a cheaper rate than that charged by private insurance companies," was criticized by Joseph A. Marr, Chartered Life Underwriters and president of the local life underwriters organization.

The Senator's declaration that such annuities could be sold at 30 per cent below private rates was termed by Mr. Marr "bad economics as well as bad politics." "Annuity rates are controlled by three factors," he said. "First, mortality, and the Government would have no advantage here, not being able to influence mortality rates so that Government annuitants would live shorter lives than private annuitants.

"The second factor is interest earnings. Government annuity reserves would presumably be invested in Government bonds, the return from which would be from 30 to 40 per cent lower than the return which life companies earn on their total investments. Based on this factor alone, Government annuity rates would be higher than company rates.

Cost of Business

Referring to the third factor, that of cost of acquiring business, the local underwriters' chief executive stated, "Assuming that the loss to the Government of premium and other taxes and also the expense of administration and premium collections would be footed by the already overburdened taxpayer, the only additional savings to the Government as contrasted to private enterprise would be the item of commissions, compensating the agent for his service both at the time of the sale and throughout the lifetime of the annuitant, as well as service to beneficiaries following the death of the annuitant. Over the average premium-paying period of annuities, it is estimated that these commissions would average considerably under 4 per cent, a far cry from 30 per cent.

"There is only one source from which the Government could draw the other 26 per cent of the 'savings'—from the pockets of the public through taxation. And this is bad politics, for in effect the Senator is suggesting that the average man, who pays the great portion of the tax bill, shall subsidize through further taxes the annuity buyer—who is generally far above the average as a wage earner."

Taxes Make Up Difference

Mr. Marr suggested that the Government can sell any commodity more cheaply than private companies, but someone must make up the difference between private and Federal rates, and this one is the taxpayer. Asserting the reported statement by Senator Wagner that life insurance companies are interested only in annuities of $100 per month and more, and that the Government would keep out of company competition by limiting the amount sold to $100 per month, Mr. Marr said:

"The average annuity payment by life insurance companies last year was far below $100 per month. The figures average approximately $349 annually per contract, or about $29 per month. This shows conclusively that a great part of all individual annuities in force in America are well below $100 per month."

Mr. Marr recalled an experiment by the Canadian government several years ago in selling annuities at prices lower than those of the regular life insurance companies. "What finally happened in that case," he said, "was that the Government had to readjust its rates upward because it was found that it was losing too much money on the operation."

The National Association of Life Underwriters, of which the District of Columbia association is a unit, will oppose to the utmost the entrance of Government into any phase of the life insurance field, including the annuity field, Mr. Marr emphasized, since this would mean the undermining of free private enterprise. He declared that the life insurance business, of all businesses, is least in need of Government solicitude. This is proved by its depression record, a most flawless one, he reminded.

Christmas Clubs For 1940

Christmas Savings Clubs for 1940 were opened this week by 19 local and several suburban banks, under practically the same regulations as those which have applied in recent years. They provide for weekly payments by, and no interest to, club members. Amounts subscribed will range from $20 to $1,000, it is estimated.

Some banks will deduct a 50-cent service charge in cases where subscribers discontinue club membership before expiration of the club year, this charge being made to defray bookkeeping costs. Washington has led the country for years in per capita subscriptions to the clubs.

Local banks which will have clubs next year include American Security & Trust Co., Anacostia Bank, Bank of Commerce & Savings, City Bank, Columbia National Bank, East Washington Savings Bank, Hamilton National Bank, Industrial Bank of Washington, Liberty National Bank, McLachlen Banking Corporation, Morris Plan Bank, Munsey Trust Co., National Bank of Washington (Water street branch), National Savings & Trust Co., Riggs National Bank (branches only), Second National Bank, Security Savings & Commercial Bank, Union Trust Co., Washington Loan & Trust Co.

Retail Trade 6-12 Per Cent Over Year Ago

Eastern Cities Report The Largest Relative Sales Improvement

By the Associated Press

The Nation's retail trade expanded along seasonal lines this week, Dun & Bradstreet reported today in its weekly survey. Total volume was estimated at 6 to 12 per cent ahead of the similar 1938 week.

"Buying in newly opened Christmas departments," the agency said, helped lift the sales volume.

"Consumer attendance in large stores was said to be showing more impressive gains over last year than actual dollar purchases. Clearances attracted unusual numbers of shoppers.

"Merchants continued to note a moderate improvement in the size of the average sale compared with last year; slightly higher prices and the increased interest in better quality merchandise were factors in the development.

"In many stores, good volume in home furnishings departments more than took up the slack in turnover of some apparel lines.

"The largest relative improvement was recorded for cities in the East, which had an average gain of 9 to 16 per cent. For the Pacific Coast the advance again was less than 3 per cent."

Bombay Buying Chief Factor in Cotton Advance

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—Cotton for December delivery rose above 10 cents a pound in the futures market today and closed at 10.07 cents. The market finished 8 to 14 points higher, with all months except May and July, at new highs for the season.

Brokers found the key to the market's price pattern in action at Bombay and orders from Bombay brokers. Soaring foreign prices, they said, have been one of the chief props in a rising local price scale.

Foreign advances seemed based on the theory that intense marine warfare might not only dissuade shippers from putting cotton on the water but also destroy some of the staple that did get under way for overseas ports.

Liverpool was also a good buyer here at the start. Following slight midday recession, the list was bid up to the day's top levels on a renewal of Bombay and spot house demand plus short covering in December.

Cottonseed Oil

Hedging against purchases of crude oil and profit-taking were the main depressants.

Sales totaled 104 contracts: December, *6.53; January, *6.54; March, *6.72; May, *6.82; July, *6.92. *Bid.

Crude oil was quoted nominally at 5½ cents in the Southeast and Valley, following overnight sales at that price. Texas was quoted 5⅝@5½.

New York, Dec. 1.—In comparatively slow trading, the market value of 100 representative common stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange depreciated $1,114,034,000, or 6 per cent in November, according to the regular monthly compilation issued by Frazier Jelke & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange. At the end of the month, the list had a total valuation of $17,374,856,000, compared with $18,488,890,000 at the close of October, and $18,335,087,000 a year ago.

This was the second consecutive monthly decline, the index having decreased $348,570,000, or 1.8 per cent in October, and followed an advance of some $3,155,767,000, or 20.1 per cent during September when the Jelke index had its sharpest rise since June, 1938.

Each of the 13 components of the index recorded declines in the latest period. The downtrend was led by the rail equipment group, which dropped 14.3 per cent, closely followed by the steel section, which decreased 21.9 per cent. Railroad shares fell off 9.5 per cent, mining stocks 7.3 per cent, oils 7.0 per cent, building 6.5 per cent, and retail issues 5.4 per cent. Chemical and motor stocks declined 4.0 per cent each and miscellaneous industrial equities 3.0 per cent. The smallest loses were recorded by the utility and food groups, which receded 2.4 per cent and 2.1 per cent, respectively.

Dr. Julian Huxley Arrives With Wisecrack About Shaw

Dr. Frank Moulton, permanent secretary of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and Dr. Julian Huxley, British biologist, go over plans for Huxley's lecture tonight at the Willard Hotel under auspices of the American Association and the Smithsonian Institution

Disagreement With Playwright 'Means You're On Right Track,' Briton Observes on Leaving Train for Lecture Tonight at Willard

Dr. Julian Huxley, noted British biologist and philosopher, came to Washington last night to tell American colleagues his hopes for applying scientific principles to the social and political problems of a chaotic world.

The field is too complex for a running interview in Union Station, Dr. Huxley told reporters. Instead he touched lightly on George Bernard Shaw, dictators and the London Zoo.

Asked if he agreed with the playwright's observation that Russia has already won the war, Dr. Huxley replied, "I always disagree with Shaw. If you find yourself in disagreement with him, that means you're on the right track."

The biologist was reminded of one of his books called, "If I Were Dictator," written in 1934. Would he revise it now?

"Quite frankly," Dr. Huxley confided, "I've frogotten what was in that book." He has written 25. He permitted himself a quick smile and continued, "I don't think I should be such a bad one, though."

Dr. Huxley is head man in one spot—the London Zoo. As director of the great zoological park he had to give the orders last September for extermination of all poisonous reptiles, a precaution against destruction of their cages in air raids.

"Some of the older lions and bears and tigers had to be killed too," he recalled. "They eat a frightful amount, you know."

The 52-year-old scientists landed in New York Monday. As representative of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, he will deliver the exchange lecture at the American Association's annual convention, beginning in Columbus, Ohio, December 27.

Tonight he speaks at the Willard Hotel under auspices of the American Association and the Smithsonian Institution on "Science, Natural and Social."

Pan-America Seeks Curb on Cargo Rates

Conferees Urge Maritime Commission To Take Action

By the Associated Press

Economic experts of the 21 American republics asked the Maritime Commission yesterday to cooperate in avoiding "unjustified" increases in ocean freight rates between the nations of this hemisphere.

A plenary session of the experts, comprising the Inter-American Economic Committee, approved a resolution which also asked the commission to lower as far as possible the costs of transporting commodities between this country and Latin America.

The resolution asked the Maritime Commission to what extent shipping services to Central America had been increased in the last three months, and to what extent it was planned to increase such services in the immediate future. Ever since several large intercoastal vessels were withdrawn from the New York-California trade last year, representatives of countries at which they formerly called en route have been seeking to have other ships take their place.

The committee agreed to issue a statement urging increased tourist travel between North and South America.

It said it faced the immediate problem of "maintaining active" the shipping routes of this hemisphere, as a definite means of preserving and intensifying commercial and personal contacts.

"The Inter-American movement of freights is already increasing its normal level," it said. "It is passenger travel which is called upon to stabilize and increase our maritime traffic."

The next meeting of the full committee was scheduled for next Wednesday. The subcommittees were expected to remain in recess over the week-end.

Caroline Harris' Funeral Held

She leaves a son, Dr. Herbert W. Harris, and three sisters.

Md. Bookkeeper's Gunshot Slaying Baffles Officials

Baltimore, Dec. 1 (AP).—Detectives sought clews and a motive today in the baffling death of Albert C. Cooley, 63-year-old bookkeeper fatally wounded in the real estate office where he was employed.

Cooley, a native of England and a bachelor, was found dead in his office yesterday afternoon. He had been shot in the thigh with a .38-caliber bullet and Dr. William B. Vandergrift, medical examiner, said he undoubtedly had been murdered. No gun was found.

Dividend to Be Paid Next Week; Others To Be Paid in January

Eleven thousand depositors of the defunct Park Savings Bank will receive "Christmas gift" dividend checks totaling $400,000, it was announced yesterday by John F. Moran, receiver.

The checks, which represent a dividend of 12½ per cent, will be paid out next Thursday at temporary headquarters on the second floor of the postoffice building at 1413 Park road northwest.

There will be no money at that time, Moran said, for the group of depositors in the so-called "1929 group," because of court proceedings in which their claims are involved. However, this group can expect a disbursement shortly after the new year, he said.

New Miami Train Christened Here

"The Champion," the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad's new streamlined Diesel-electric New York-Florida train, was christened in Union Station yesterday by Miss Betty Creighton, Pittsburgh secretary, who won a Nation-wide name contest. She cracked a bottle of orange juice while the train paused 15 minutes on its inaugural run.

Yesterday morning the train was dedicated in New York City by Lyman Delano, chairman of the board of the Atlantic Coast Line. The train is scheduled to make the New York-Miami run in 25 hours, fastest time for the distance at present.

Public Greets Southeast Church Survey

Enthusiastic Response To 300 Investigators Reported at Dinner

Enthusiastic response to the opening of the Southeast Inter-Church community survey was reported at yesterday's monthly meeting of the Southeast Minister's Association.

The clergymen of six denominations and nine churches lunched at the Christ Episcopal rectory, 620 G street southeast, and discussed the survey, which this week sent 300 men and women into several thousand homes to discover how available social and religious resources are being used. It aims at combatting juvenile delinquency in the area.

The results will not be known for several weeks, when the data has been tabulated by a worker loaned by the Social Welfare Department of the Washington Federation of Churches.

The support of the project by the social welfare department, through its head, the Rev. John L. Mixon, the federation and the press was praised in a resolution adopted at the meeting. The Rev. George H. Bennett, chairman of the interchurch movement, and Wilson Memorial Church pastor, presided.

Other clergymen at the meeting were Dr. Warren D. Bowman, Washington City Church of the Brethren; the Rev. Ralph W. Loew, assistant pastor of the Reformation Lutheran Church; the Rev. Leslie L. Bowers, Fifteenth Street Christian; Dr. Charles Sly, assistant pastor, Metropolitan Presbyterian, and the Rev. Bernard I. Barnes, North Carolina Avenue Methodist Church.

Scout Troop 5 Sees The Post Made

Sixty Boy Scouts from Troop 5, St. Alban's, last night got a first-hand lesson in how a newspaper is put out, by being shown through The Post, with eight members of the troop committee looking on.

Ted Davis, senior patrol leader, was in charge. The boys publish a weekly paper of their own, the Troop Five Trailmaker, and were especially interested in The Post's makeup and presses, contrasting them with their own. Dick Rogers, whose father is a newspaperman, edits the weekly.

The visit was the first of a series of trips planned this year through Washington institutions, Scout Leader John H. Bayless said. Troop 5, which includes many amateur printers in its ranks, is the largest troop in the city.

Zoo Finds Sea Lion Is Male After All; Hopes for Cubs

That sea lion that arrived at the Zoo last week from London, remember? Well, its name is Cholmondeley after all, not Lady Jane.

"Yes sir, we could tell from their different barks that the newcomer is a male," said William H. Blackburne, head keeper. "It was a very pleasant surprise. Soon; maybe, there'll be little sea lions."

In other words, as Blackburne explained, the Londoner's true gender was determined only when he was transferred to Molly's tank below the bear pits and keepers had a chance to compare the timbre, volume, etc. of their respective barks.

The widow Molly was the Zoo's only sea lion until Cholmondeley came here as a war refugee from London Zoological Garden.

Maybe it was wishful thinking, but Zoo Director William M. Mann and Blackburne thought the new addition was to be a male. That was before they saw it. Upon its arrival, however, the head keeper decided the specimen was a lady sea lion, basing his judgment upon its size and general contour.

But now that Cholmondeley has been moved from his temporary tank near the lion house and introduced to Molly in her pool below the bear pits, their peculiar barks have convinced Blackburne he has a pair on his hands.

"And that's far more desirable," he said.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

P. V. M. has an unhappy story concerning a hand which he and h' partner bid to six hearts. They were defeated two tricks by bad distribution in hearts and diamonds.

He says:

"Might I suggest you try this hand on some of the experts, for I am curious to know whether they would bid it into the unmakable slam in hearts, as our little foursome did? The hand, with North-South vulnerable, West dealer:

♠ J 10 6
◇ J 10 8 7 6 5
♣ K J 4

♠ 3	NORTH	♠ A Q 9 5 4 2
♡ A K 10 7 6	WEST / EAST	♡ J 9 2
◇ A K Q 3 2		◇ 9
♣ A 2	SOUTH	♣ 9 8 7
	♠ K 8 7
	♡ Q 8 5 4
	♣ Q 10 6 5 3

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
2 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	5 ♡	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	Pass	Dbl.
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: J ♠

"The hand evoked considerable discussion, and though we tried to play it from every possible angle on paper, we could arrive at no better result that down two tricks. Still, we feel that East and West, not vulnerable, can hardly miss bidding a small slam. Can your readers suggest better play or bidding, or shall we just say that West got a bad break in diamonds and hurry along to the next deal?"

Va. Candidates List Expenses as Zero to $1,459

Richmond, Va., Dec. 1 (AP).—Expense accounts of candidates in Virginia's election November 7, show expenditures ranging from nothing to $1,459.

The largest account filed so far in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth is that of Harry C. Stuart, who defeated Dr. Jack W. Witten in Tazewell, Buchanan and Russell counties. State Senator Stuart listed expenses of $1,459, most of the total going as compensation for workers and traveling expenses.

The greater number of the accounts which showed any spending were below $100, and of the 34 from the Senate who have filed, at least 21 checked off their election expenses at zero.

TED HUSING

A large portion of this afternoon's air time on WJSV will be taken over by the talented vocal chords of Ted Husing. At 1:15 the Husing will begin his description of the Army-Navy game at Philadelphia and continue until the last Kaydet has bit the dust. Or will it be Midshipman?

The Husing is one of the true vets of radio. He has been pouring words into microphones for fifteen years, a few of which were spent in Washington. He is that rare bird, a typical New Yorker, although he was born in Arizona.

Husing got his start by being the first sportscaster who could give a fairly reasonable explanation of the difference between left field and a fordward pass. He has played practically every sport, has an absolutely unbelievable memory, knows the King's English and the result is America's No. 1 sports announcer.

Ted started life standing on a soap box exhorting passersby to part with a dime, "one-tenth of a dollar," in exchange for a little jim dandy combination potato peeler, screwdriver and pen knife. From that it was a natural step to radio.

Husing's knowledge of Husing's talents can get a trifle irksome at times, yet there are sides of him that are a little better than all right. For instance, he has had three assistants. Each of the three was a boyhood chum of Husing, and Husing, in common with his friends, had very little coin of the realm in his boyhood. As the result of the Husing association all are prosperous today.

Chapter 70

"YES, I REMEBER," said Timothy.

"I've never forgotten it. Never. You see I didn't know my own mother. She died when I was very small. It was grandfather who brought me up."

"Yes, I know," said Timothy.

"So when my baby was coming and I wanted to think how to be a mother, I didn't have any mother of my own to remember and try to live up to. And I took yours. I thought over and over about what you'd said about her. I could see as if you were right there with me, just how you looked when you were talking about her. And I thought, 'I'll try to live with my baby so that when he grows up, he will look like that when he remembers me.'" Looking into Timothy's face and not recognizing the expression on it, she asked, faltering a little, "You don't mind my taking your mother for mine?"

"No, I don't mind at all, dear Susan."

She gave him her soft, wide smile, and forgot him instantly as she stooped once more to lay her cheek against the baby's. "Little Tim," she murmured, "oh, Tim! Tim!" It was the baby's name not Timothy's she pronounced.

LEFT ALONE on the bench, Timothy, with a long breath, leaned back, took off his hat and laid it on the bench beside him. The sun shone warmly on his head. He thought without bitterness how faded his hair must look in the unsparing brilliance of the sunlight, thought how that same light would set a crown on Canby's gleaming brown mane.

He took the thought quietly as he was taking everything on this first visit to his namesake. It was like the tranquility of one who has come to a goal. Well, he had—an unexpected—an ironic goal.

He sat musing vaguely, letting his mind sink down into the stillness. He thought of his mother. A man of

He thought of frustration and all that he had taken as proof of its irevitability. And after reflecting on this for a time, asked himself tentatively, "Can what seems like frustration be—sometimes—only the resisting of growth?"

At this his mind, conditioned to the acrid taste of doubt, leaped up suspiciously to examine the idea for sentimentality. "Growth? A fine-sounding name for dying! To accept all this—for I've accepted it or I wouldn't be here. To let it all happen, for I've let it happen. I can call that accepting growth. But it really is a tame acceptance of death. To forty-six seldom thinks of his mother. Downer, he knew, never thought of her at all. That was the real death, when the memory of you was gone, quite gone. But there—shining, ineffable—the spirit of his mother's loving life rose from her grave and began to live again.

resist it no longer—not to fight to the last breath against it—to sit down now in sadness which is no sadness, feeling the inner current beginning to set away from bitterness, imperceptibly, incredibly to set toward contentment with what I have—that means, doesn't it, nothing but that I've condemned half of myself to death?"

HE WHISPERED the words aloud—"to death . . ." But from the sunny stillness around him, full of life, no echo came back. No leaf eddied down in its way to the tomb. The leaves on the old, old maples were all new to life, hung young, soft, transparent to the sun. And when—long months from now—their turn came to die, to be buried, to be forgotten—the next June would clothe the ancient trees in a glory for which death is but a passing episode.

He turned the idea around in his mind, considering it, and presently set a facet of it in a light which struck off a lively sparkle of self-mockery. "Accepting death, am I?" he asked himself aloud ironically. "I'd better. Ha!"

Then fearing that his voice might have wakened the baby, he leaned forward to look into the basket.

The smooth bland face had not stirred. Wrapped in his cocoon of sleep, far from irony and doubt and death, the baby lay breathing lightly, breathing free, glowing with life as the morning star glows with light.

Timothy sank back on the bench. "Oh, well, what do we all do, every day, but die to what we leave behind?" he asked himself, his eyes dreamily fixed on a life that had just begun

New U. S. Program To Help Tobacco Growers Outlined

By the Associated Press

Secretary Wallace announced yesterday the Government would help farmers remove 30,000,000 pounds of 1939-grown fire-cured and dark air-cured tobacco through a program of purchases and loans.

The Commodity Credit Corporation will buy from growers the portion of the crop formerly acquired by British manufacturers. The latter have withdrawn from the market because of that country's desire to conserve its foreign exchange for purchase of war materials.

The corporation will buy about 4,000,000 pounds of tobacco and hold it under option for the British buyers. The latter may take advantage of that option until October 1, 1941. The corporation also will make loans to grower-cooperative associations for the purchase of about 26,000,000 pounds of the tobacco as a price-bolstering measure.
